THE CHRONICLES AND MEMORIALS OF
GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND
DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

PUBLISHED BY THE AUTHORITY OF HER MAJESTY'S TREASURY, UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE MASTER OF THE ROLLS.

ON the 26th of January 1857, the Master of the Rolls submitted to the Treasury a proposal for the publication of materials for the History of this Country from the Invasion of the Romans to the reign of Henry VIII.

The Master of the Rolls suggested that these materials should be selected for publication under competent editors without reference to periodical or chronological arrangement, without mutilation or abridgment, preference being given, in the first instance, to such materials as were most scarce and valuable.

He proposed that each chronicle or historical document to be edited should be treated in the same way as if the editor were engaged on an Editio Princeps; and for this purpose the most correct text should be formed from an accurate collation of the best MSS.

To render the work more generally useful, the Master of the Rolls suggested that the editor should give an account of the MSS. employed by him, of their age and their peculiarities; that he should add to the work a brief account of the life and times of the author, and any remarks necessary to explain the chronology; but no other note or comment was to be allowed, except what might be necessary to establish the correctness of the text.

The works to be published in octavo, separately, as they were finished; the whole responsibility of the task resting upon the editors, who were to be chosen by the Master of the Rolls with the sanction of the Treasury.

The Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury, after a careful consideration of the subject, expressed their opinion in a Treasury Minute, dated February 9, 1857, that the plan recommended by the Master of the Rolls "was well calculated for the accomplishment of this important national object, in an effectual and satisfactory manner, within a reasonable time, and provided proper attention be paid to economy, in making the detailed arrangements, without unnecessary expense."

They expressed their approbation of the proposal that each Chronicle and historical document should be edited in such a manner as to represent with all possible correctness the text of each writer, derived from a collation of the best MSS., and that no notes should be added, except such as were illustrative of the various readings. They suggested, however, that the preface to each work should contain, in addition to the particulars proposed by the Master of the Rolls, a biographical account of the author, so far as authentic materials existed for that purpose, and an estimate of his historical credibility and value.

P R E F A C E .

I.—OF THE ERA EMBRACED IN THE WORK.

IT was clearly a feeling that he was sanctioning the trial of a great experiment of very uncertain result which caused Pope Innocent the Third to hesitate and adopt half-measures in dealing with the proposals laid at his feet by Francis of Assisi. A pontiff who had excommunicated the rulers of the half of Europe, who had brought whole provinces under his own temporal sway, and who, aided by the secular arm, had crushed the Albigenses in a bloody crusade, was not a man among whose faults indecision could ever have been numbered. Before him were difficulties graver and harder to be encountered than any physical forces likely to be arrayed against his power, and there had come to his aid men willing to combat those difficulties, proposing their own methods, and asking no help save a mere commission from the highest spiritual authority to rouse the torpor of Christendom, and to go forth to fight for God and the Church against the spirit of infidelity. Obvious as the proper course may have seemed to one endowed with the warm faith of an enthusiast, the policy of the Ruler of Christendom would require rather to be moderated by a sense of responsibility, than to be guided by impulsive zeal. If evil should spring from these new remedies themselves, the weight of that evil and the duty of mitigating its effects would sooner or later lie heavily on the shoulders of him who occupied the chair of St Peter. The care of all the churches had indeed become an incubus of perplexities, but there was a kind of familiarity about recurring problems in which already well known factors were involved. The sovereign princes of Western Europe, the bishops, the secular clergy, the monks, and, further away from sight, the shadowy Emperor of the East and the Saracen—these were forces whose resultant a pope was accustomed to calculate. These he knew almost by the traditions of his office how to balance against each other. But Innocent was now solicited to admit a totally new and untried power to take a place among the rest, and to us whose wisdom has come long after the event, it seems that he did well to hesitate, and would have perhaps done better to refuse.

The ground on which the Church was ordained to work was already doubly occupied. The secular priest and the monk had worked out a modus vivendi, albeit an indifferent one. What would be the effect of introducing a third element dissimilar in every way to both? If the friar should posture as a living reproof to the golden ease and spiritual indolence of the monk and to the ignorance and uncanonical life of the parish priest, would the reproof be taken in the spirit of Christian humility? Some kind of fermentation must result from the infusion even of a quickening leaven into the body spiritual, and that fermentation must pass off favourably; the body cooling down after a passing fever, or serious symptoms of moral blood-poisoning might only too easily supervene. Clearly then it was a matter for cautious treatment, this idea of sending forth a swarm of missionaries to teach and preach and tend the sick and the outcasts, and gain the sympathy of the poor man by being as poor as himself. If the great ideal were attained and sustained all would be well, but if the friar should be launched on a course of spiritual rivalry, if he should gradually acquire the vices of his clerical surroundings, and a coarser contamination from those he was sent to assist, it might happen that by so malign a combination, like as by the chemical compounding of quiescent substances, a true and most active solvent of existing order might all too soon be reached.

Three centuries form a gulf that human foresight has never yet spanned. But had it been possible for the great pope to have seen in these islands the main divisions of the church discrediting each other in the face of the laity with yearly increasing indecency, he would have recognised the fact that the friar had destroyed the possibility of that natural balance which years would assuredly have brought about between seculars and regulars, and had thus, in the great result, lost to the papacy a kingdom destined to be of primary importance in Europe.

Whatever the reason for reluctant action may have been, it was certainly only after much hesitation that, in 1209, Saint Francis was accorded verbally the approbation of the pope. No bull or writing was given, nay, distinctly refused, and a way for the suppression of the new movement, should it be found practically inconvenient, was thus visibly left open for some years until, in 1215, it was judged that the Order of St. Francis might be put upon a permanent footing. Even then the rule was only approved verbally by the Lateran Council. More perhaps could hardly be expected from an assembly which was enacting a decree against the origination of new religious orders, but this in itself was good witness to the early merits of the Franciscans.¹

The primitive condition of the Grey Friars,² their aims and their work in this country, have been most ably sketched by Professor Brewer in his preface to the volume of which the present is a continuation, and it is safe to assert that no facts elicited by later investigations will lead a student to differ in any way from his conclusions. The present volume is, however, more particularly concerned with the sad story of the decadence and fall of the Franciscans, and its purpose has been to gather or to give references to the scattered and very scanty records now remaining as traces of these energetic workers.

There is an indefinable charm in Eccleston's simple narrative as he details for us the results of his quarter century of working and watching in his beloved Order. Of these early Franciscans it is almost impossible to think any evil. It was nothing less than the attraction of a truer holiness that caused the phenomenal growth of the Order. Here ¹ a bishop resigned his see, there an abbot put aside his dignity and donned the grey garb of a mendicant friar, while the learned or the enthusiastic who found no scope in their own monastic orders, escaped, like as from a prison, to the sanctuary of the Franciscan habit.² These can be signs of nothing less than a rallying of the strength of that piety which has never in the darkest times died out from the church to so great an extent as her enemies are eager to assert.

The voice of jealousy was for a time not loudly raised. It is ever most fittingly evoked by the baser elements of social existence, and must seek matter for complaint in something else than sanctity of life and disinterested good works. Neither monk nor beneficed priest could enviously refer to the poor plot of ground, the mud-built friary, or the royal bounty which dispensed a few oak trees for beams or fuel;³ but the duration of this calm, sad it is to say, cannot be safely reckoned even by decades.

The Minorites reached England in 1224. Under the year 1235 Matthew Paris launches against them his first accusations.¹ These can be tested by original documents still extant,² and, in at least one clear instance, must be regarded as true, though true for a date about twenty years later than that named by the great chronicler.

A living writer remarks that the English mind ever requires an outward stimulus to keep alive its zeal, and that when this exciting cause is withdrawn it relapses into apathy. Notably is this the case with the career of the English Minorites. The burning zeal which had at first consumed all inner impurities cooled far too rapidly. The friar began to find his Rule too strict, and successive popes granted relaxations and privileges which sought to make his way more easy. It is not, however, to be supposed that considerable evils had as yet shown themselves in more than isolated instances, for the Council of Lyons in 1274, when restraining the tendency to erect new orders and actually abolishing certain classes of mendicant friars, specially excepted the four great orders, using the remarkable words "Sane ad Prædicatorum et Minorum ordines (quos evidens ex eis utilitas ecclesie universali proveniens perhibet approbatos) præsentem non patimur constitutionem extendi."³ Witness such as this could scarcely be borne in a general council of the Western Church to an institution which was visibly failing in its purpose. But whatever the further history of the Order in foreign countries may show, for our own country it must be admitted that the beginning of evil was near at hand, and we have only to turn to the consideration of the earliest concrete cases which actual records enable us to examine in order to find the first signs of the decadence which we are bound to trace.

of feud with Monastic Orders.

No one has endeavoured to sift truth from early documents without longing for parallel records not written by the pens of ecclesiastics, but it will sometimes happen that beside the prejudiced statement of one of the parties in a quarrel, we are so fortunate as to possess the testimony of a third person. Still greater certainty is, however, reached when this witness, though a notorious partisan, is compelled to give unwilling evidence against his own side. This greater certainty is unexpectedly to be found in the case of the quarrel between the Franciscans and the monks of Bury St. Edmunds, a warfare which raged for at least six years.

Invasion
of monastic territories.

Dispute
with monks of Bury St.
Edmunds.

As has been stated above, Matthew Paris (anno 1235) complains that a party of Minorites, taking advantage of being within the territory of a great Abbey for the purpose of preaching, would, on some pretext of illness or the like, stay for the night. Under cover of darkness, he asserts, they would erect a wooden altar, place it on a small consecrated stone slab brought for the purpose, and celebrate a mass. Having thus gained an ecclesiastical footing, they would hear confessions, say masses, and ultimately even despatch messengers to Rome to obtain substantial concessions. These would often be yielded by the monks from fear of a scandal and from dread of the power already gained by the Order at the court of Rome itself. With no differences worthy of special indication this sketch is a succinct history of the scandal at Bury St. Edmunds.¹ The Annales de Dunstaplia give 1233 as the date of the Franciscan invasion of the town, but there is little difficulty in believing that the quarrel took a definite shape in the year 1257, the date assigned in the account from the "Registrum Werketone" printed in this volume, if we assume that the Franciscans, having previously held a temporary site, obtained at the latter date a grant of ground within the limits of the town, and began to erect a permanent Friary.

According to the narrative now printed the Franciscans began just in the way Matthew Paris has described, entering treacherously, but holding subsequently with a lawful title won by the arts of insinuation. The monks on the other hand openly glory in having violently pulled down the Friary and expelled the friars twice. It is curious to notice that the monks speak with scant respect of Pope Alexander the Fourth, charging him with showing undue favour to the friars, apparently little understanding the action it now appears that he had taken in the matter.

A hitherto unidentified bull in the Lambeth Palace library, however, gives a decisive side light on this dispute. It is directed to the English Minorites, and refers to their conduct toward the monks of Bury. Without its leaden seal, and only dated in November in the third year of one of the Popes who bore the name of Alexander, this bull has passed unnoticed, but as the date referred to above (1257) was the third year of Alexander IV. it may safely be ascribed to him. This document² shows, in the first place, that the supreme Pontiff, though once the Cardinal Protector of the Order, was guilty of no blind partisanship, and in the second, that the Franciscans, though at first injuriously treated by the monks, were subsequently misconducting themselves, and continuing the quarrel in a manner which called for authoritative interference.

In considering this quarrel we must remember that a Benedictine Abbey would in such a matter be responsible only as a monastic unit, but that under the strongly centralized government of the friars the fault of the Franciscans of Bury must be viewed as the fault of the whole English province.

This affair would thus appear as a grave symptom of failure in a high purpose, and that too (to take the most favourable date) after a course of but little more than thirty years had been run.

Dispute
with monks
of Worcester.

We are prepared by this narrative to place some confidence in the lamentable story told in the *Annales de Wygornia*¹ of the issue of a quarrel in the year 1290 about the forcible rescue of a corpse from the friars of Worcester, and its burial within the precincts of the monastery. Archbishop Peckham ordered that the body should be given back to the friars, who bore it away in procession with chanting and great pomp, after a speech about their rights had been delivered to the assembled crowd.

The annals of the same monastery (anno 1291) also give an account of the general chapter of the Minorites at Cork, in which the Irish friars, by producing a certain papal bull, caused such a quarrel that bloodshed ensued. The annalist adds the sarcastic couplet:—

Bullæ papales sunt fratribus exitiales.

Qui quondam mites, faciunt nunc prælia, lites.

These assertions, however, are not capable of proof, but in a fourth instance of great importance we are enabled by documentary evidence to reach a surer position.

Matthew of Westminster² states that about the year 1290 the Minorites, who had now gained great ground, “miserably infested the monks of Westminster and Worcester.” Of the Worcester affair thus alluded to we have just seen the circumstances, and some documents³ now printed for the first time from the originals in the possession of the Dean and Chapter of Westminster, enable us to ascertain the facts as regards the remaining allegation.

Dispute
with monks
of West-

William of Pershore, once a Benedictine monk, had taken the habit of a Grey Friar, but about the year 1290 had returned to his old Order, and was sheltered in the Abbey of Westminster. He selected that refuge, it may be, on account of the presence of Alexander of Pershore, possibly a relation or formerly a fellow monk in Pershore Abbey. With him he had carried some books, which, as no friar could own property, were claimed no less than the apostate himself by the Friars. There already existed a papal privilege denouncing an excommunication, absolvable only at Rome, against all who harboured apostate Franciscans, and Archbishop Peckham caused the sentence to be published. An appeal was made to Rome, and the case was heard at Orvieto before the cardinal of St. Lawrence. His award was wholly in favour of the Franciscans, the Abbot Walter de Wenlock was forced to perform a public act of humiliation, penances were enjoined, fines were imposed, and the apostate was, if possible, to be captured and restored. The terms of the arrangement were hard, and it is creditable to the Franciscans, who seem indeed to have been in the right all through, that they subsequently modified the conditions by an agreement which appears to have been fully carried out.

A complete triumph like this over the wealthiest abbot of the great Benedictine Order is somewhat of a Pyrrhic victory after all. There is a moral loss in a contest which would assuredly have been instantly abandoned as unworthy of a Minorite, we will not say by St. Francis or even Agnellus of Pisa, but by Haymo of Faversham, a man who could fight a stout fight for his Rule within his own Order. Such a victory, too, over one of their admitted chiefs must at once have increased the growing bitterness of the Benedictines against the Minorites. The enmity, moreover, of these particular monks of Westminster cannot be accounted a light thing to encounter, for these, or many of them, were the men who appear in the Patent Roll of 31 Edward I.¹ as having been consigned to the Tower for the celebrated robbery of the King's Treasury in 1303. One of them, Alexander of Pershore, prominent as proctor at Rome against the Franciscans, was certainly the man who took the black panniers full of treasure to the pier, and who threatened to kill John Albon if he revealed the crime. A further point of interest attaching to the quarrel is that the anger of Archbishop Peckham was so roused by the conduct of Walter de Wenlock that he refused to officiate in the abbey at the funeral of Queen Eleanor in 1290.¹

of rights of parish clergy.

If the Franciscans seriously invaded the domain of the monks their encroachments on the secular² clergy were still greater, and that too, it is to be feared, in proportion to the weakness of the position they were assailing. These priests were necessarily somewhat loosely connected units, but there is the far more important fact that they very frequently lost the respect of their parishioners by marrying, in contravention of the canon law, and by practising as lawyers in the various courts of the kingdom. To the aid of these considerations came a potent ally inadequately termed the weakness of human nature. As Matthew Paris notes³ it was easier to confess an act of shame to a strolling friar, whose face might never be seen again in the town, than to the parish priest; and then too, it was hard to endure a penance inflicted by a man whose own conduct was possibly not higher than the level of his penitent's moral life. That these persistent invasions are not single instances universalised by railing accusers we have clear evidence. In Archbishop Peckham's Register⁴ we read that the Minorites possessed by repeated Papal authorisations the right of hearing confessions and of absolving all persons without distinction and without previously asking the permission of the parish priest. This power the Archbishop directed that they should be allowed to exercise without hindrance.

It is not surprising that the secular clergy viewed with detestation the men empowered thus rudely to depose them at will from that office which of all others gave a priest power over his flock. But this was not all. The holiest men must ever be preferable as guardians of the sanctity of the grave, and their habit assumed in the last moments of life must be the most potent armour procurable against the ghostly enemy.¹ It was clear, too, whatever faults might be discoverable by a coldly searching eye, that these friars were more spiritual than the country gentlemen, the farmers and manufacturers who dwelt in splendid convents and called themselves monks. Certainly they were preferable to the greedy clerical lawyer who was bending under the burden of a half-acknowledged family, and who, while taking a legacy, often failed to remember the masses it was intended to secure. These diversions of legacies were another aspect of a grievance so sore in all its phases that at last, after more than a century and a half, the aid of the popes was grudgingly extended to the suffering seculars. Boniface VIII. in the year 1300, decreed that the Minorites should not preach in parish churches without leave, and should give the canonical portion of all legacies—a miserable fourth—to the parish priests. The latter provision was for a time withdrawn, but in 1312 the Council of Vienne again established the rule.² The Decretals themselves show how fearful the tyranny of the friars must have been, nor was this tyranny ever much abated, for it is impossible with such an antecedent history not to give credence to the allegations of Richard FitzRalph, Archbishop of Armagh, in his pleadings before the pope at Avignon in 1357,³ although, owing to unknown under-currents of influence, his bold efforts did not effect any reform.

Relations with bishops and the pope.

The feelings of Archbishop FitzRalph towards the mendicant orders were probably shared, though less openly, by a majority of the bishops, for these friars, like the larger communities of monks, claimed and obtained¹ complete freedom from episcopal control.² In its interior organisation their Order, like all ecclesiastical institutions, shows a clearly marked democratic constitution, more democratic indeed, in later years especially, than the monastic orders, in that the greater officers according to their rank were compelled to resign on the occasion either of every provincial or of every general chapter, and were removable at other times for insufficiency or misconduct. This organisation was very complete, ranging upwards from the superior of a friary, or the warden of a convent, through the grades of custos and provincial minister to that of the minister general residing at Rome. A body of this kind, it will be readily admitted, was not favourable to the good order of a diocese, but the popes, to whom the friars were ever friendly, had by means of it the convenient power of controlling a number of spiritual garrisons all over Europe by communication with one head, and, as the many diplomatic missions entrusted to Minorites show, the Pontiffs found them obedient auxiliaries under a great variety of circumstances. The numerous brief biographies of Minorites gathered by the industrious author of the "Collectanea Anglo-Minoritica" show a large amount of interflow between the foreign and the English convents. Communications clearly were well kept up, and the periodical meetings

in provincial or general chapter must have strengthened powerfully the sense of unity at the expense of that of nationality. The lack, too, of proprietary attachments must have operated in the same direction, no less than the wandering habits of the friar, and must have caused him to be ready to move, like the more modern Jesuit, from place to place or country to country, as the good of his Order, or the needs of his overlord the pope, might at the moment require.

We have already seen that the Rule of St. Francis was very early found too strict for complete observance, particularly in a country like England. Evidence has been given to show that the Order was soon launched on a series of contests which it could scarcely have avoided, and the need either of strengthening its position or retreating before its enemies must have been obvious to its rulers. Enthusiasm entirely undirected by worldly wisdom can prevail for a short time only over worldly forces, and this was clearly the opinion of the popes who assisted in modifying the original design of the founder. A race of friars dependent strictly on voluntary offerings or the results of mendicancy must soon, especially in a country like England, have been literally starved in the recurring times of famine and pestilence. When all but the rich were in perpetual anxiety as to their next meal, the friar commissioned to minister to the spiritual wants of the poor and to live of their bounty must necessarily have stood no chance of food to keep body and soul together. In times of epidemics he who was attending the plague-stricken could have been no welcome visitor to those who were hoping to keep the pestilence from their door. Some means of obtaining a small independent income as a resource in times of emergency must therefore be sought, and if the Rule should stand in the way then, though regretfully, the Rule must be evaded or modified for the sake of the continued existence of the Order it governed. In the same way the Order found it needful to qualify itself for competition of a different nature. Not to be eclipsed or rather—for such would have been the result—rendered useless by the Dominicans and others as preachers or as confessors, theological learning at least was essential. Thus another modification of the Rule must come about, and as men who study need to be freed somewhat from other duties, a favourable interpretation must be put on ordinances respecting labour. Here, however, the assistance of the pope was required, and we must turn to the pages of the Canon Law to see what actually happened.

Rule relaxed by Nicholas IV.

Attentive consideration of all these necessities is shown in the Declaration of Nicholas IV. touching the Rule. If nothing could be possessed in common by the friars, even books and other requisites for Divine service and study would be beyond their reach, and it was therefore decreed that all proprietary rights in minor necessities for the use and benefit of the Franciscans should be held to vest in the Supreme Pontiff, to whom also should belong all friaries and churches of the Order. Loans continued to be forbidden, yet, to procure necessities, the friars might bind themselves to repay either by labour or out of alms received, but the alms-giver himself should, if possible, be the intermediary. If he should die, his heirs or executors might be sued at the law if necessary. Legacies expressed in a form contrary to the spirit of the Rule must be repudiated—thus a field to cultivate, a house to let, might not be accepted, but money, or a house, or field, to be expended on the necessities of the brethren would be a permissible benefaction; and further, the right to such a legacy might be sustained by the friars before the courts of law. The touch of money was ever to be avoided by a friar, but a gift might be changed, by sale if requisite, for some lawful and necessary article; and, lastly, spiritual and mental labour being preferable to bodily toil, the latter should not be imposed on those fully occupied in efforts of the higher class.¹

The second great Declaration on the Rule was put forward considerably more than a hundred years later by Clement V. in the Council of Vienne.² Between these two documents differences may be detected which evidence a general falling off from the high standard of the older days. Directions are given as to certain minor points, such as clothing, election of officers, &c., and an authoritative division of the absolute from the variable or less strict injunctions of the Rule is laid down. It is ordered, that beside the fasts from All Saints' day to the Nativity and the ordinary Lenten abstinence, the brethren shall be bound to the general fasts imposed by the church on all Christians; but it is noticeable that no mention is made of the intermediate fast to which St. Francis exhorts his followers. After ruling that persons entering the Order may give to it their property, but must not be persuaded so to do, the Declaration concerns itself mainly with directions calculated to avoid for the future various accusations brought against the Franciscans. These were apparently understood by the Pope to be that the friars not only suffer but procure themselves to be made testamentary heirs; that in some cases they receive rents so large as to form a maintenance for the whole convent; that when their affairs are before courts of law they personally intermeddle; that they undertake the duties of executors and arrange cases of usury or the return of stolen goods, &c.; that they cultivate large gardens and even large vineyards, and sell the crops; that at harvest and grape-gathering seasons they beg and buy to so great an extent as to provide for their consumption during the whole ensuing year; that they build such beautiful churches and convents that their edifices seem fitter for magnates than for mendicants; that they have church ornaments in value even beyond those of great cathedrals; and lastly, that they receive as funeral offerings horses and even arms. These charges, as the Pope states, the rulers of the Order deny, but he none the less proceeds to legislate against the growing worldliness of the friars.

Movement
for a return to strict observance of the Rule.

The lines on which the Church has ever proceeded are happily so special and peculiar that, after learning all that can be alleged respecting the evil condition into which a great religious institution has fallen, we look almost as a matter of course for the commencement of those efforts which have seldom failed to be forthcoming for renewing and setting in order that which has been weakened and decayed.

Rise of the Observant Franciscans.

It is hard, perhaps, to escape from the conclusion that a movement of reform is at least a confession of previous disorder or insufficiency, but on the other hand a reformation from within, a self-healing process, is good evidence of vitality. Signs of a desire for a return to the strict Rule of St. Francis appear before the middle of the 14th century. After the General Chapter of Toulouse in 1373, at which Pope Gregory XI. presided in person, considerable advances were made. A division without disruption commenced, and the number of houses occupied by Observant, as distinguished from Conventual Franciscans, slowly increased. All, however, owed allegiance to the same high officers of the order, until (in 1415) the Council of Constance granted the Observants a separate head or vicar general, who, however, was still nominally subordinate to the minister general of the entire order. This office of vicar general was held in 1438 by the celebrated Bernardine of Siena. In 1446 the Observants were permitted by Eugenius IV. to hold a General Chapter and to present their elected vicar general for merely formal confirmation in his office by the minister general. Later still the so-called Bull of Union gave the Observants precedence over the Conventuals, though it would seem that they were not the more numerous section. In England, where it is asserted that the Rule had even been more strictly kept than on the continent, the reformation caused no disruption, though there was some rivalry. Edward IV. was a great patron of the Observants, and Henry VII. and, in his earlier years, even Henry VIII., favoured them, though this section of the Franciscans was, a few years later, the first to suffer at his hands. Early in the 16th century they seem to have numbered twelve convents in the English province.

The statutes of the Observants printed in this volume were collected in the general chapter of Barcelona in 1451, and are probably the earliest collection of their regulations which has been presented in type. They exist in this country in a single manuscript copy preserved in the Bodleian Library. The foundation of all this legislation was of course the Rule of St. Francis, but the authoritative interpretations and relaxations of Nicholas IV. and other popes, and the inevitable growth of case-law had, before the middle of the 15th century, rendered codification a necessity. The mere transition from a primitive Rule, to be followed in its spirit, to a code of laws, to be interpreted by the letter, suggests the idea of a loss of moral elevation. Then, too, when it is considered that we are dealing with the work, not of legal theorists, but of men who are palpably prohibiting the recurrence of offences already more or less frequently committed, we see that the statutes under consideration testify to past sins and abuses often serious in form and degree.

Almost the first regulation is that no one under 16 years of age shall be admitted as a novice. When we find that in 1358 the University of Oxford vainly endeavoured to prevent the abduction of young students which had then become so frequent as to deter parents from sending their children to Oxford, this enactment appears utterly insufficient for the protection of the unwary. But even this is an improvement on the state of things indicated in a decretal of Alexander IV. which speaks of novices under 14 years of age.¹

The mode of life inculcated in these statutes is undoubtedly one of great strictness. From Compline to Prime, that is from about seven in the evening to six in the morning, silence is enjoined throughout the year, and at specified seasons during other hours as well. Clothing is to be of the cheapest, shoes are forbidden, as also are feather-beds and linen sheets, and the friar must sleep in habit and femorals and wear his cord. Two lenten fasts in every year are prescribed and even a third is advised, though, on the other hand, meat in moderation is allowed at other times.

Every friar must travel on foot, and the miserable evasion of the rule by riding on asses when the use of horses is denied, must under these statutes disappear. A companion must be taken on every journey, and each is bound to report secretly on the behaviour of his associate. The confessions of women are a subject of much solicitude, for the practice of hearing confessions was a most important business of the Order, and the punishments assigned to all offences against purity are very severe, and are extended to cases of grave suspicion. In one clause the statutes touch lightly on a class of offences often imputed to cœnobites of all Orders, but without dwelling on these matters, it may be said that the importance of a legislative reference is great in testing general report. Possession of property of all kinds by individuals, or by the Order, as might have been expected, is forbidden, and a friar found at his decease to have any possessions is deprived of Christian burial, though the further indignity mentioned in the Decretals is not prescribed. Apostasy, however, was the great offence, and the vagabond friar was, both by royal and papal enactments, to be caught wherever found and handed to his superiors for punishment. We have seen, in the case of William of Pershore, the commotion that a single apostate friar could cause, and the great importance attached to his capture, and in the statutes of the Observants we see that such an one when caught was to be flogged—the only case in which such a punishment is named. Forgery, perjury, theft, assault, the procuring of promotion, and the invoking of external interferences in the affairs of the Order, these were the offences for which since the Rule of St. Francis was first drawn up it had become, on account of a few isolated delinquencies we may hope, necessary to legislate. The punishments inflicted under this code were varied, but two only were serious—imprisonment and flagellation. The rest graduated downwards to a childish level,—to eat his dinner sitting half clad upon the floor being the meed of the friar who would not sleep in his clothes. By these statutes the Observant Friars are clearly intended to abstain from the practice of acting mystery plays then prevalent among the Conventual Franciscans, for it is specially forbidden them to put on female or indeed any secular attire whatever pro ludis faciendis.

The requirement of bodily labour remains in full force in these statutes, but there is nothing to enlighten us as to the kind of work usually done and the extent to which there was actual labour for an equivalent; but that such real bodily toil was still to some extent customary is evidenced by a regulation in the Decretals forbidding friars to make bargains respecting their hire, and another permitting money sometimes to be borrowed under a contract to return the value in labour.¹

vow of
was kept.

In one point the Rule of St. Francis was obeyed almost to the letter during the three hundred years' course run by the Order in England. The Franciscans, except in instances so isolated as to be unworthy of mention, can by no stretch of language be termed landowners. The site of a friary and a garden form a modest possession which the most carping spirit of envy must pass unnoticed. Indeed, it is a matter for admiration that the Franciscans put such very narrow bounds to their desires. The grants entered in the Patent Rolls down to the end of Henry the Sixth's reign relate to small plots of ground, often to a lane proposed to be enclosed or a spring to be led within the friary.¹ We must therefore look to other possible sources of income if we wish to see whether or not holy poverty was maintained among the Grey Friars in England. The temptations resulting from having to compete with the wealthy monks and the seculars, who, though poor, had stipends, must have been great. To sustain themselves effectually by sheer begging in mediæval England would have been to turn mendicancy itself into a positive industry, so great would have been the exertions needed. Other ways were open, and they were taken, though some of them brought the friars into contests often positively disgraceful, always detrimental, to the cause of religion. Detractors had a true ground of attack when they alleged that the Franciscans sought to make the wills of the dying, securing thereby funeral offerings and legacies for masses, as well as sums for specified benefits. A glance at the wills collected in Sir H. Nicolas' "Testamenta Vetusta," wills mostly of distinguished people, detects ever recurring entries of legacies to the Friars Minor; while an analysis of a considerable number of wills of persons of a much humbler class extracted from the registers of the Norwich Consistory Court by the late Mr. John L'Estrange,¹ shows that at a time when the Grey Friars were falling out of favour every third will conveyed a gift to them. Pensions from the king too, were another source of income, and these seem to have been liberally granted. They continued down to the early years of Henry VIII., but as their revocation was so easy a matter—a mere cessation of payment—Speed's catalogue contains no traces of them. A series of examples of these grants showing the variety of forms which they took may be seen in the extracts from the Harleian MS. No. 433, printed at p. 265.

Regular offerings, too, resulted from the practice, very common in the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, of organising religious guilds. Nothing would be easier or less fair than to represent these useful and humanising institutions as having been started by secular priests and friars for the sake of the various offerings which indubitably flowed in from them. That they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel is a rule no less of common sense than of apostolic teaching, while the suggestion that the gospel is preached for the sake of gain is one of those drops of bitterness with which malice can at will defile any pure stream. Any person who can disentangle himself from nineteenth century surroundings and can read the fourteenth century by the light of fourteenth century ideas must see clearly that the guilds, whether religious, merchant, or craft guilds, were a potent organising force in a direction which was at that date wholly right and good. As may be seen in the collections of Mr. Toulmin-Smith² and Mr. Rye,³ they directly and absolutely enforced the most important moral laws, brought men and women socially together in a wholesome civilising way, acted as benefit societies and burial clubs, and in the direction of commercial and political action have done more than can even be glanced at here. That monks, secular clergy, or friars should by the offerings of the guild-brethren, whether at annual festivals or funerals, be aided in keeping their hands free for clerical duties, and not least, for assisting to direct such institutions as these, must certainly be right and proper. The case of the guild of St. Elene at Beverly shows exactly what happened. Each year on the feast of their patron saint a procession of the guild went to the church of the Friars Minor. Mass was sung, and every brother and sister offered a penny. At other times there were masses for the deceased brethren, accompanied by the usual offerings, and if the accounts of the guild showed a balance at the end of the year the amount was devoted to the poor and to the maintenance of the guild chapel. The object of this particular guild, Dr. Brentano says, was the representation of religious plays, a feature of mediæval life which has attracted much attention at the present day. In organising and acting miracle plays the Franciscan friars took a decided lead, and so far was it reckoned in late times one of the recognised callings of the Order¹ that the corporation registers of York tell us that in 1426 William Melton, of the order of Friars Minor, "Professor of Holy Pageantry and a most famous preacher of the Word of God," made arrangements respecting the Corpus Christi play in that city, evidently as manager of the performance. The more famous Ludus Coventriæ was wholly in the hands of the Minorites. The plays forming this collection,² Dugdale tells us,³ were "acted with mighty state and reverence by the " Grey Friars," who "had theatres for the several scenes " very large and high placed upon wheels and drawn to " all the eminent parts of the city for the better advancement of spectators." Here again it is easy for the voice of detraction to say that the representations were coarse and ridiculous and to assert that nudity¹ was tolerated on the stage. The Ober Ammergau plays, however, by their beauty and dignity have done much to enable the nineteenth century to understand these mediæval "miracles" and to comprehend that they were an elevating influence to our simple ancestors. Profit, of course, flowed from these performances, and some will allow and others deny that the labourer in this instance was worthy of his hire, while the question whether these plays were acted for the sake of money or the money received for the sake of having plays, will divide opinions just as does the biological problem whether organisation produces life or life causes organisation. One evil result we must allow may possibly and exceptionally have flowed from the custom of acting plays. He who was an entertainer in public had temptations to become an entertainer in a more private and less reputable way, and occasion has thus been given to a modern writer to say of the Franciscans that "their jocularities and ribaldry made them " the welcome associates of the licentious and profane."² How far this general assertion is fair is a matter for doubt, but that it is not without some foundation there is positive proof³ in a Franciscan MS. in the British generalisation from single instances is here or elsewhere intended. Original records respecting the Franciscans are very scanty, and if in their case we can test the truth of general report by single documents we must perforce be contented.

Museum.¹ This is, unfortunately, nothing less than a collection of ribald and profane songs mixed with parodies on the services of the church. The song printed in this volume² will show the character of the whole sufficiently well, and is an interesting early instance of the device of obtaining a ludicrous effect by grotesque perversions of grammar.

Charges
made against
friars, &c.

In most of the general accusations against the conventual system monks, nuns, and friars are inextricably mixed up, and before examining by the aid of a document printed in this volume, one specific charge against the friars, a few words may be said on the general question. All that men of the stamp of John Bale could do in the way of defiling the memory of cœnobites in general has been done, and though Bale is a discredited man, he and others like him have completed a work which can now scarcely be undone, and the memory of those who indubitably preserved religion and increased learning in the land is almost hopelessly besmirched. One³ of the many ways in which these calumnies were being insinuated at a comparatively late date may be seen in certain "Chantry Certificates," and the motive of the imputations is not far to seek. In these we find details respecting the conventual buildings, and the character of their inmates written legibly, as though the record had been liable to be seen by persons interested in the truth of its contents. If we look closer, however, at those parts of the document in which personal character is touched on, we shall see interlined here and there a few words so much abbreviated and in so small and scrawled a hand as to pass at first sight as the aimless scribblings of a listless penman. More careful investigation will, however, show that a meaning too foul for record in these pages is to be attached to them, and these secret reports will be seen to be charges which none probably had the chance of disproving, and which have since been taken as irrefutable.¹ In comparison with these allegations against other orders, one particular charge often brought against the Franciscans seems light indeed, but if we can throw real doubt on the justice of one of the lesser counts in the general indictment, we may reasonably doubt the goodness of a cause which could not neglect the support of minor calumnies. It is said that the Minorites and other friars sold certificates, which when produced by a friend to a conventual chapter, entitled a deceased person to the prayers of the brethren. Bundles of these letters of confraternity were, it is said, shamelessly carried about, each letter having a blank for the insertion of the name of a purchaser. Of these letters very few have been preserved, but in the Bodleian Library, bound up as fly leaves to a manuscript of little value, are the halves of two of them. One is certainly a Franciscan "Letter of Confraternity," the other may be, or may have been issued by another Order,² but whether this be so or not, the manuscripts in each case show beyond the possibility of doubt that the whole document was written on behalf of the person named in it. Further evidence must therefore be called before we can trust the charges made on this point.

Under the primitive Rule and under its subsequent modifications the injunction as to bodily labour remained in force, but naturally there are but few documentary evidences now remaining respecting matters of this labour.

¹ Records of the visitations of bishops show that the condition of some small convents was not satisfactory. The secret history of some modern public institutions would afford equally good moral grounds for dissolution, but no private greed of gain could now be indulged.

humble nature. St. Francis thought that his friars could live by manual work supplemented by mendicancy, and no doubt his plan was in the earlier and purer times strictly carried out, though, strangely enough, Eccleston makes but little reference to actual instances.

In later times, however, it would seem that the Order consisted in an increasing degree of friars in holy orders and that the labouring element was proportionately small. Taking, as an instance, the obituary record of the Aberdeen convent of Observant Franciscans,¹ we see among the brief biographies therein recorded but four or five only of men who worked at handicrafts. Friar John Strang, priest and worker in glass, some of whose work possibly remains at the present day, stands at the head of the list, followed by Friar John Thomson, whose temperance in food, drink, and sleep, in spite of his laborious calling as carpenter and mason, is recorded in touching terms. Two other friars appear to have been carpenters, and one perhaps a professional scribe, the remainder priests, preachers, and confessors. Thus it is probable that the Aberdeen convent, albeit of Observants, was not sustained by the bodily labour of the brethren, nor does the record fail to shew the means by which the friars were really supported. Local benefactors seem to have been numerous and most liberal in daily alms no less than in legacies, and if to their beneficence may be added some of the other sources of income already indicated, it will be seen that, though not wealthy, these Observant Friars were in good repute and were not allowed to lack the comforts of life.²

Money obtained from fines inflicted by confessors.

The last source of income to which reference is made in the materials collected in this volume is one which appears only by a rather vague enactment against it.

² The inventories of goods seized in English friaries by the King's visitors, 1537-8, - often mere gleanings after a harvest reaped by local peculators,—cannot be trusted as indications of poverty.

In the *Abbreviatio Statutorum*¹ confessors are bidden not lightly to impose pecuniary payments by way of penance for sins, and if such penances should seem proper to be inflicted the results are not to be taken by the confessor or his brethren. The mode of disposing of them is, however, not positively prescribed, and it would be difficult to believe that to Conventual Franciscans, at least in later times, the practice thus touched on did not prove a source of income.

Leaving the question of ways and means, we may pleurably turn for a moment to the list of learned Franciscans which forms one of Luke Wadding's careful collections. So much has been said on this aspect of the Order that but few words will suffice here, yet the folio volume which contains the long muster roll cannot be passed over entirely in silence. That most of this vast mass of work is now profitless reading is no true condemnation of the workers. If the names of Ockham, Scotus, Hales, and others are to most men great only by traditional reputation, and are merely revered with the derived respect which ignorance often pays, it is because we have ungratefully forgotten the hidden foundations which are still doing us true service. The precision of thought in theological matters which was first cultivated by industrious commentators on the Master of the Sentences is itself no mean inheritance for later days, but the many branches of physical science first developed by the Franciscans are a gift so truly magnificent as to command the respect of all. Of these merits Professor Brewer has spoken fully² and more need not here be written, yet a word should be said of other matters not so frequently remembered. Evil seems to be in one sense a coin of ascertained value. The most careless can form a tolerably true idea of a crime or an act of dishonour. These can be recorded and after ages can accurately weigh their guilt and try them by the standard of current sins. It is not so with moral worth. The silent inward accumulation of just views and sound principles, the training of the soul to work with no effort on the lines of truth and duty, these are either unrecorded facts, or are recordable in a language only intelligible to him who has learned the symbols by which man's moral history must be expressed. A list of a man's virtues may appear to be no more than the lightly given tribute of careless good nature, too kindly to speak evil, and reckless from the consciousness that no reckoning will be taken. Hence eulogies of the departed are generally passed over as of little value, or of no intelligible value, while the sad blot which a true biography exhibits is the one thing which is thoroughly and in a living sense comprehended and remembered.

Contributions of the Franciscans to the learning and moral improvement of their age.

Transferring to the many that which is true of the individual, we may perhaps acknowledge that a satisfactory estimate of the Franciscans is at this date scarcely attainable except through an effort of the imagination which colder natures might perhaps stigmatise as emotional. We have traced some faults, and must trace still more; of isolated crimes a few, of the ordinary sins of human nature and the debasing of high purposes not a little. We have seen the channels by which meaner motives found their outlet, but here and there we are encountered by a salient fact which shows, that whatever were the sins of the few, whatever the jarrings with external systems, a high and holy purpose was kept alive in the Order at a time when its enemies would ask us to believe it to have been utterly vicious.

It is not disputed that in the awful visitations of the Black Death in the fourteenth century, the Franciscan Friars in different parts of Europe perished literally by thousands through their devoted attentions to the sick and dying. Here there is no room for cruel detraction. If the friar's presence as physician both of soul and body influenced the testament which he alone had the courage to prepare at the bedside, the unprejudiced will consider it probable that the brave man scarcely dreamed of avoiding a sudden summons to follow the patient whose last moments he had befriended. When the motive was so singly a wish to strengthen his Order for future good works it is an unworthy quibble to accuse the Franciscan of a breach of his vow of poverty. To visit the sick and afflicted has for nineteen centuries at least been the correlative to keeping a life unspotted from the world, and why the argument from good works to virtue should fail in its application to the great body of the Franciscan Order it is indeed hard to see. They visited the sick and preached the gospel to rich and poor, they were physicians and theologians, and profound in the scientific learning of their day, and it would be surprising if individuals from an Order intellectually so pre-eminent were not frequently called aside to assist in the work of the world.

We are dealing with centuries to which the idea of the church as a controlling agent in political and social life seemed to have been perfectly familiar and natural. With cardinals and bishops acting as leading statesmen and with mitred abbots in Parliament it would appear remarkable if the friar had wholly held aloof from social and political action at a time when both were being so aptly guided by the church, and thus we may prepare ourselves for a new and distinct aspect of the Order in England.

Political action of the Order in England.

Readers of history are familiar with phenomena which may be taken, very much according to individual bias, either as political movements with a religious guise or religious movements under a political banner. Enthusiasts in both directions coalesce for a time and appear as one body, until some fundamental question becomes a touchstone by which the allies try out their essential differences. What the real bond of union was between John of Gaunt and John Wyclif it would be hard to discover, for if we say that each recognised in the other a powerful disintegrating force, potent against all prescription and all authority, we are compelled to acknowledge on the other hand that the final objects of each of these men were totally distinct. Our present interest in them both is that their union dated a new departure in the history of the English Franciscans, though the divergence of the latter from their old lines was not for some years very wide.

The fierce contests of the Franciscans with Wyclif had drawn them, as indeed the whole church was at first drawn, into deadly opposition to his allies the Lancastrian party, a party which first mooted the idea of confiscating the wealth of ecclesiastics. As years went on the friar became a political schemer, and when the seeds of civil commotion sown in the later years of Edward the Third had begun to bear fruit, the Order of St. Francis, adopting the White Rose, began to pour out its blood and to furnish political martyrs.

Opposition to Henry IV. and Henry V.

The very silences of old records, those too which seem to have no reference whatever to the subject matter of the moment, are fraught with instruction. Under the strict Rule of St. Francis a list of grants of property should rarely if ever have contained a reference to his Order, yet it is a fact that on the Patent Rolls for the reigns of Henry III., the three Edwards, and Richard II. there are as many as 112 entries relating to the Franciscans. Three entries only occur in the first year of Henry IV., the year in which that king sought a general conciliation of all parties; there is one isolated entry of a grant to the Friars of Dunwich in his tenth year and then all is unbroken silence until the early years of Henry VI., when a few entries are again scattered along the rolls, growing significantly more frequent after the death of John, Duke of Bedford.¹

If we now turn to the chronicles of the time we find that in 1402 Henry IV. was sorely troubled by the industry with which the Minorites spread the report that Richard II. had not died at Pontefract, but was alive in Scotland. For this interference the king, who nevertheless diligently sought the favour of the Church as a whole, caused Richard Friseby and eight other Franciscans to be hanged. There is a political consistency in the fact that in 1460, as we shall presently see, the friars south of Trent dreaded lest they should be massacred, and were seen to be ranged decisively on the side of the Yorkists. History shows that many years earlier the friars were opposed to John of Gaunt, and this explains the circumstance that in Wat Tyler's rebellion the Franciscans, the duke of Lancaster's foes, were specially excepted by the rebels from their list of the proscribed.²

No better illustration of the social and political actions of the Minorites in the midst of the turmoil of the fifteenth century can be gained than by examining the words and actions of a distinguished Franciscan who lived during the Wars of the Roses.

Incidents
in the life of a Franciscan during the Wars of the Roses.

Friar John Brackley, a Norwich Franciscan,³ a Doctor of Divinity and a famous preacher, is one of the few men of his Order whose lesser acts and motives are after the lapse of four centuries distinguishable with any vividness. The thread of his life, interwoven with the web and woof of a stronger fabric, appears and

reappears in the "Paston Letters" in various aspects, —he is seen as confessor and executor, politician and preacher, now as in danger from accusations before his own Order, now as fearing that the wild lawlessness of the time may sweep his brethren and himself to sudden destruction.

Early in 1454 he pays a mysterious visit to Paston Hall, going away with his errand untold, the master of the house being from home, nor does he come again before us until the summer of 1456, when he begs John Paston to get him copies of some indictments, so that when Sir Thomas Tuddenham and others accuse him at the next Provincial Chapter, he may be ready to show to his Order "lyk a Kalender, a legende of here "lyvys," thus minimising the credit of the "cursed "covy." Even when touching so serious a matter he cannot conclude without a playful recommendation of two widows to a friend, eligatur quæ sibi melius placet.

More than three years later the old warrior, whose skilful use of an improvised entrenchment had won the battle of the Herrings, lay dying at Caister. Friar Brackley is with him, transmitting the old knight's wish, "God send me sone my good cosyn Paston," but immediately digressing to mention the dark hints of Fastolf's secretary as to the executory powers he will have under his master's will. Brackley appears in the will as one of those on whom its carrying out may devolve in case of the default of others, and he is one of the important witnesses in the litigation which ensued some years afterwards about it.

Late in the year 1459, at the time when the Duke of York's army had dispersed at Ludlow, Brackley himself stayed for a time in the west country, but returning and, writing from Walsham, refers to "a lewde doctor of Ludgate" who had charged that no one should pray for those "Lords traytours," the earl of March and his allies; but, adds the Yorkist friar, "he had lytyl thank as he was worthy." A few months later Friar Brackley, apparently established in his patron's house, narrates how in the absence of his warden Barnard he had preached with approval before justice Yelverton and others, and on the following day had borne part in a warm dispute, in the course of which he was angrily told that "the Lordes above at London arn " infoormyd of you and they schal delen with you " well enow."

No harm befel the friar, for in June, and so just before the fight at Northampton, a messenger is told to pass by Cambridge and bring with him to London Brackley's license (perhaps as resident confessor) from the provincial of the Grey Friars, and Brackley himself, later in the year, writes from Norwich a budget of election intelligence touching the Parliament of October 1460. "Yf owt come to my Lord Warwick but good," adds the friar, "far weel ye, far weel I and al our " frendes." Another letter of about the same date in dispraise of an opponent shows by the request, "Rogo " detis mihi licentiam recedendi ad conventum " Norwici ad mutandum vestimenta mea," that the writer is still in residence at Paston Hall. Again, just before the battle of Wakefield, he pens a deeply interesting letter to John Paston full of suggestions for the ear of the Earl of Warwick, advising the committal of a neighbouring gentleman to the Tower or Newgate, warning the Yorkists against the Bishop of Norwich, and proceeding to state that the Queen's party, according to intelligence received, designs the slaughter of the writer and of all the Franciscans dwelling "citra flumen Trent."

Trifling allusions to Friar Brackley, his preaching at St. Paul's, &c., occur in the letters for 1461, but Friar John Mowth, a Minorite, writing in May 1466, and referring to him as dead, seeks for "certain oblygacyonys " entrusted to William Paston by Brackley of the “ weche the date xuld grow to my convent yn “ Norwyche ” desiring the same “ for the comfort of the “ dede and profyth of my convent. ” On the day of his death Brackley gives his testimony in the disputed matter of Sir John Fastolf’s will, asking his confessor to report “ that I took it upon my sowle at my dying “ that that wyll that John Paston put in to be provyd “ was Sir John Fastolfys will. ”

One undated letter written from Caister is of interest. Friar Brackley refers in it to begging for one day’s food for the Provincial Chapter of his Order, it being apparently the duty of the friars to cater in turn.

The picture of a Grey Friar of the middle of the 15th century thus undesignedly drawn contrasts strangely with an ideal derived from the “ Rule ” and the pages of Eccleston. The meekness of this sturdy disputant is nowhere apparent. His business is with the rich, the poor he nowhere names. He has left the leper and is tendering advice to the King-maker himself on the blood-stained politics of his time. The plaint he prepares to meet before his brethren is no self-denounced sin, half the fiction of an overstrained conscience. It is some home-thrust of worldly accusation which he will parry by blackening his accusers’ character. If his warden is present as physician at the dying knight’s bedside, he is himself conspicuous there by the care he has taken to assist in the preparation of the last will, and the instruments by which the church is to take one more collegiate foundation. If the somewhat significant sentence, “ be war of Minerres fro hense forth, ” placed in close collocation with advice as to the choice of a confessor, is not to be taken as a reference to Brackley (then some years dead) it may fairly be said that there is no more harm apparent in the friar than in many a political clergyman of fair fame in the estimation of the eighteenth century ; but our business is with St.

Francis and his followers, and we must judge them by his standard.

The facts already noted respecting the practical discontinuance of grants to the Franciscans during the reigns of Henry IV. and Henry V. are remarkable as assisting to show, that while Friars and Lollards virulently hated each other, the former were as obnoxious to those kings as the latter are well known to have been. Many of the notions which Wyclif entertained are, it must be admitted on all hands, at once theological and political. An age so little advanced in practical thinking as to regard the possession of gold as the ultimate object of trading should be looked upon with some leniency when it takes an equally simple view of State policy in another direction, and stamps out those who are unfortunate enough to be affected with an infectious mental disorder. At a time when all advanced opinions are abundantly diluted with the waters of indifferentism they may be left to the certainty of feeble interaction, but in the fifteenth century abstention must have seemed impossible, and might indeed have been really imprudent in a ruler. Hence we can estimate the force of the repulsion which prevented Henry IV. and his son from making common cause with those who were the most learned, capable, and energetic opponents of Lollardism. When in 1485 civil and religious peace had once more become possible in England, the Franciscans enjoyed a fifty years truce and appear to have busied themselves mainly with the affairs of their own Order. The movement for a more strict obedience to the rule already referred to was proceeding, and would tend to quell any tendency to political action, while Henry VII. himself gave much direct assistance to the Observants, and Henry VIII. selected a Franciscan as a confessor. But the long calm only preceded a more bitter storm. On the 20th April 1534 Hugh Rich, warden of the Franciscan convent at Canterbury, and Richard Risby, warden at Richmond, suffered death for their share in the imposture of the Holy Maid of Kent. On the 1st of May 1534 Peto, warden of the Observants of Greenwich, preached before Henry VIII. the celebrated sermon, in which the king was compared to Ahab.¹ On the 15th June, Bishop Lee and Thomas Bedyll visited the Greenwich convent and in vain directed the friars to subscribe articles denying, among other points, the supremacy of the pope.² Lastly, on the 11th August, began the expulsion of the Observants from their convents. The Conventual Franciscans endured for a short time longer, but the end of monasticism in all its forms was close at hand, and the Order of St. Francis fell in the general ruin. In 1553 certainly a revival became possible, and that revival was attempted.³ Very little national interest however attaches to this shortlived effort, and Elizabeth early in her reign once more expelled the Minorites from their convents.

The reason why the first blow should have fallen on the Franciscan Order is generally stated to have been the marked, nay violent opposition, offered by the stricter section of the Minorites to the divorce of Henry from Katharine of Aragon. This statement is true to some extent, but it fails to reach to the root of the matter. We have seen the thoroughness of the Franciscan organisation and the subordination of the respective grades of warden, custos, and minister provincial to one head or minister general. Over all these was stationed, by the express desire of St. Francis, a Cardinal Protector of the Order, and thus the connection with the Papal Curia was completed. There is little then to wonder at in the fact that the most devoted section of the greatest order of friars should become the chosen soldiers of the pope. By communication with their chief, who lived at Rome, he could direct the whole army just as modern popes have wielded the similar organisation of the Jesuits. The hold that Henry had over the bishops, monks, and parochial clergy was enormously strong, but over men who had nothing whatever to lose and had all the reverence of true enthusiasts for the crown of martyrdom, the despot's power was disappointingly small. The intolerable wrong done to the king's majesty was this, that the Observant Franciscans were in fact and action the garrisons of a belligerent foreign power. When coarsely reviled the king's defence was made in a mere counter address from the pulpit, a strange sign of hesitation in a man of Henry's nature, but his decision was soon taken, and his reply to the rude rejoinder which followed was the commission to Lee and Bedyll to require the Observant Friars to deny the supremacy of the pope. This was the watchword, and failing to utter it they were forthwith attacked and dispersed. The blow was quickly followed up, and our interest for the time in the widened campaign is centred in the single fact that its first skirmish was fought with the Franciscans.

Had the church been true to herself at one crucial point the whole of English history would have been altered. Had Anselm acted as Lanfranc's example would have taught him, the name of papal supremacy would have been but a rumour to English ears. It would have been impossible for the monks to obtain that freedom from wholesome control which permitted them to work out their own ruin. In place of foreign priests thrust into English livings for the mere sake of plunder, and of abbots absorbing the greater tithes, we should have had a married clergy distributed over the land, with suitable endowments enabling them to fulfil their duties to the poor. Lastly, if in a country covered thus with a network of well administered parishes, and studded with monasteries acting as centres of learning and incentives to a higher life, there had proved to be any room for a missionary order, the Franciscans would have found their energies directed by the bishops and all occasions for strife and jealousies removed. But in the order of Divine Providence it was not so to be, and the Franciscan with his high aims and noble works, sometimes failing, but as often gathering strength again, was destined to become a permanent disturbing influence, an independent irresponsible power acting and reacting for three long centuries on other powers scarcely more controllable. Historically fitting in every way, therefore, it seems that the torch which lighted the final conflagration should have been actually applied by the hand of a follower of St. Francis.

II. THE STATE AND HISTORY OF THE MSS.

I. The two manuscripts from which the late Professor Brewer obtained the text of Thomas Eccleston's treatise "De adventu Minorum in Angliam," printed in vol. I., are described by him at p. lx. of the Preface, and specimens of each are given in fac-simile in the body of the volume. The peculiar circumstances, however, under which a portion of this treatise is now printed render it necessary to recite from the first volume a few facts relative to the York MS., and to describe some points connected with the copy in the Cottonian Library at greater length. "The York M.S.," Professor Brewer writes, "consists of 43 pages in small quarto. More than a century since it was examined by Dr. Richard Richardson¹ and an account of it, with a summary of its contents, transcribed by him for Hearne the antiquarian, and published by the latter in his edition of ¹ A clergyman named Richard Richardson was tutor and chaplain to the Isham family for several years up to about 1685, but I cannot show his identity with Hearne's correspondent.

“ Otterbourne, vol. I., appx. p. xcii. In his letter dated from York, 5 July, 1726, Dr. Richardson states that even in his days one third part of the MS. seemed to have been written with bad ink and the writing was almost defaced.”

In another place Professor Brewer states that Eccleston's treatise “ is found in a mutilated MS. in the Chapter Library at York; the latter portion of it has been totally obliterated by damp. Happily a fragment of the latter portion, preserved in another MS. in the British Museum, has enabled me to recover nearly the whole of this singular and interesting narrative.”

Thus it appears that from the beginning to the end of the 7th chapter (pp. 1-31 of the printed text), and from the early part of the 14th chapter to the end (pp. 61-72), that is, for about 42 out of 72 pages, it has hitherto been necessary to rely entirely on one manuscript.

While the only two MSS. to which any clear reference has been made by the writers who have quoted Eccleston, are known to have been imperfect since the days of Hearne, the perplexing fact has remained that Anthony Wood alludes¹ to “ perfectum exemplar Eccleston,” and having referred to a passage “ in imperfecto exemplari,” “ Tho. Eccleston, MS. in Bib. Cotton. coll. ult.,” he in another place quotes a passage found “ in altero exemplari.” Leland too (“ De Scriptoribus Britannicis”) refers to a copy preserved in the Queen's Library at Granta Girviorum.

There has, therefore, been a strong suspicion of the existence of a third copy, and certain references in Wadding's Annales Minorum have pointed in the same direction, but no search has hitherto availed to find it, and Professor Brewer reluctantly wound up his account of the MSS. by saying "There seems then little hope of recovering a more perfect or complete copy of Eccleston's work; and the extracts made from it by the writers already mentioned are too scanty to yield much help for correcting the errors and obscurities of the text."

Under these circumstances it is not a little remarkable that even a muniment room which has been found to hold such a treasure as a previously unknown edition of Shakespeare's "Venus and Adonis" should furnish, if not the means of solving the difficulties noted above,¹ at least the means of amending a considerable part of the text.

Eight leaves of a fourteenth century manuscript on parchment were found among Sir Charles Isham's collection of ancient records at Lamport Hall, by Mr. Walter Rye in 1879, and were by him placed in my hands for examination.²

At the top of the first page are the words:

"These fragments of a MS. of Tho. Eccleston belong to Sir Justinian Isham, bart. They are 8 leaves."

"Tho. Hearne, Nov. 9, 1733."

It was therefore plain to me that either a fragment of a third manuscript of Eccleston or the missing portion of the Cottonian MS. Nero A. ix. had come to light.

On comparing the latter with the newly found MS., the following coincidences are apparent:—

1. Several pages at the beginning (in print more than 30 out of 72) are missing from the Cottonian MS.³ If there were two more leaves at the beginning and three at the end of the Lamport fragment⁴ the vacant space would be exactly

² Permission to print this fragment has been liberally accorded to me by Sir Charles Isham through Mr. Rye.

³ Referred to throughout as Cott.

⁴ Referred to throughout as Lamport.

filled, for reckoning from the printed copy there are respectively about 129 lines before and 156 lines after the points at which the fragment begins and ends. Allowing for a blank leaf at the commencement, this would show that three sheets (folding into six leaves) were probably once outside the eight leaves now discovered.

2. The size of the parchment corresponds.
3. The "incidents" are written in the margin both in Cott. and Lampport. This is not the case in the York MS.
4. The handwriting shows Cott. and Lampport to be of the same age.

The points against the presumption that Cott. and Lampport were once parts of a single volume are :—

1. The writer or writers of Lampport did not write any part of Cott.
2. The size of the written page and some other minor details differ somewhat.

Again, on the other side it appears,

1. That Cott. has been written by two scribes¹ whose handwritings differ greatly.
2. The details of plumbing, size of page, &c., vary very much in Cott.

Thus it appears that certainty on the question is not attainable, and I have accordingly treated the two MSS. as separate copies, and have quoted them under distinct titles. At the same time I cannot but view them as portions of one volume separated by some mischance more than 150 years ago, and now once more brought together.

Several points—notably the words latinus (p. 13) and latinum (p. 28)—indicate a common origin for lampport and Ebor.

¹ A short passage on fo. 82 may be the work of a third hand.

The documents printed at pp. 31-62, respecting the contention between the Franciscans and the abbot and convent of Westminster in 1290 are preserved in the muniment chamber of Westminster Abbey¹ under the care of the chapter clerk. The reference in the catalogue of abbey documents is "Press 6, box 3, parcel 27."

They are original instruments, and are for the most part in the well-known hand of the Papal notaries.

Excepting the entries in the Close² and Patent Rolls, and certain inquisitions ad quod damnum, I believe that no original documents respecting the Franciscans of so early a date are now in existence.

The seals have for the most part disappeared. Three, however, remain, two of them in fair condition.

An extract from Archbishop Peckham's Register, preserved at Lambeth, is printed at p. 31, as it refers to the same dispute.

The "Abbreviatio Statutorum" of the Observant Franciscans (pp. 81 to 119) is taken from an Irish MS. in the Bodleian Library (Rawl c. 320). It is of quarto size, having double columns and is well written in an ordinary fifteenth century hand.

At the end of the MS. the scribe has given his name and the date in the following words:—

"Raptim exaratum et in scriptis redactum per "operam pauperuli fratris Donaldi Ycahalayn pro
"communitate Fratrum Minorum de Athdare 1482."³

¹ These documents were lent to me by permission of the late Dean Stanley.

² See pp. 279-297.

³ A passage in Irish follows asking, as I am informed, the prayers of all readers on behalf of those who bound and arranged the book, viz, Donough MacNamara and Margaret O'Brien.

I cannot find that any statutes of the reformed order of so early a date have previously been printed. Statutes of the Observants printed on vellum at Ingoldstadt in 1534 are found in a rare little volume in the British Museum. Another book of statutes printed in 1619, and therefore after the Council of Trent, shows a much altered code with, it may be added, the significant introduction of torture as a corrective.

The obituary record of the Observant Franciscans of Aberdeen, pp. 123-140, is taken from the original in the library of Aberdeen University.¹ It is a small quarto, now of 58, but originally of 62 folios, written for the most part in a transitional monastic hand, but including several entries in handwritings of an ordinary 16th century type.

The volume was bound originally in a stamped leathern cover, pasted on fragments of early printed books, but it has since been enclosed in a fragment of a vellum service book.

It seems clear from examination that this obituary is a copy made early in the 16th century from an older, perhaps a worn-out, conventual record. The scribe has made strange mistakes throughout. He has lettered five superfluous days under January, has misstated the length of several months, has often expressed dates by three figures only, and lastly has made a considerable number of verbal errors.

With all its faults, however, we have in this obituary calendar a succinct history of the personnel of the con-

¹ Through the kind offices of Mr. Robert Walker, the librarian, I was enabled to copy this curious record without travelling to Aberdeen, the Senatus of the University most liberally consenting to entrust it to my care for the necessary time.

vent, perhaps we may say from its foundation in 1450 (for the earliest death is in 1469) down to its dissolution in 1560.

The list of benefactors and their gifts, the notes as to the carpenter and mason friars and the "sacerdos et "vitrifaber," with the list of places he adorned with painted glass are of much interest.

Records of this character are directed in the statutes of the Observants¹ to be kept and to be duly read in every convent. The same practice, as is well known, obtained in the Benedictine and other monasteries, but the records of the Franciscans are few and slender and but little known, and a special significance attaches in consequence to an unique document like that now printed. In Bishop Kennett's collections (Lansdowne MS., No. 963), there are some notes "ex obituario conventus "Fratrum Minorum Guldefordie, MS. Norwic., 671,"" the entries being in this form:—

IX. Kal. Feb. Obitus Ven. Patris Thomæ Tidmus, Prioris hujus conventus, qui obiit A.D. 1477.

The original MS. is now, as Dr. Bensley informs me, no longer to be found in the Cathedral Archives at Norwich. Another mortuary calendar which may be referred to for comparison, and also as an indication of the unity of the Franciscan organisation all over Europe, is printed in vol. 6 of Langebek's "Scriptores "Rerum Danicarum,"" p. 557. From this the following extract will suffice:—

The chronicle of the Grey Friars, taken from the MS. Cott. Vitell., F. XII., has already been printed once by Mr. J. G. Nichols for the Camden Society, but without the marginal notes and the names of city officers. In some other minor respects, too, the manuscript has not been very strictly followed, nor has any notice been taken of several matters which tend to show the point at which it becomes the record of an actual observer of events. Like many of the lesser chronicles, the entries for the earlier years consist of extracts, often incorrect, and compilations of no value. The lists, too, of the mayors and sheriffs are often utterly misleading.

From the reign of Henry V. the recorded facts are more numerous, yet still almost entirely political, but early in the reign of Henry VII, the character of the record changes again, and much more notice is taken of ecclesiastical events. Lastly, early in Henry the Eighth's reign, the appearance of the manuscript begins to tell of a hand making from time to time entries of events witnessed or learned about, and ecclesiastical matters are always preferred to political. The tone of the ink changes frequently, so also does the pen; blank spaces are left for christian names and precise dates, some of which are ascertained and inserted with visibly different ink, while other spaces are still vacant; corrections are more frequent; passages are added in the margin, and, finally, a somewhat cautious tone prevails during times of danger.

It is probable that the friar who transcribed it, for it is all in the handwriting of one man, derived it so far as the end of Henry the Seventh's reign from a chronicle kept in another convent. The grotesque mistakes in the earlier years, the obvious misreadings of words and names, and the confusion in the list of city officers, all tell of a scarcely legible original. The MS. is on paper and is very badly written. It is of quarto size and the margins have suffered severely from the fire which destroyed so much of the Cottonian Library. Hence the names of many of the mayors (always written in the margin) and other notes have either disappeared or have been almost hopelessly mutilated.

The writer has used two marks of contraction to so great an extent as to render his real intentions as to the use of e and ne at the end of words rather uncertain. The task of following the orthography of the MS. has to this extent been rendered somewhat difficult.

Prefixed to the chronicle is a catalogue of the monuments of persons buried in the Grey Friars Church in London, and immediately before this list is placed the account of the coming of the Franciscans into England printed at pp. 493-543 of Vol. I. At fo. 326 in this part of the MS. is the following passage:—

“ MEMORANDUM quod Frater Andreas Bavard sacræ “ Theologiæ professor, anno domini 1494^o, videns chorum “ Fratrum minorum Londoniæ minus bene ins[tau-]

This entry is in the same handwriting as the chronicle, and it will be observed is expressed in the first person.

Whether or not the name of the chronicler is here given to us is a question which will probably never be decided.

All that is known respecting the life of Thomas Eccleston has already been stated by Professor Brewer in the Preface to Vol. I., and it is impossible even to furnish the names of the authors of the principal documents printed in the present volume.

In conclusion, I must return my best thanks to my friend Mr. Walter Rye, who, in addition to the kind assistance referred to at p. xlvi., has given me very great help in obtaining documents illustrating the history of the Franciscans. Another friend, Mr. Newenham Travers, has given me valuable aid in revising the proof sheets.

THOMAS DE ECCLESTON DE ADVENTU MINORUM.

Dedication of the author's work to Simon de Esseby, undertaken in the belief that practice is more influential than precept;—as other Orders had wonders to relate, love and respect for his own Order induced him to publish the accounts which he had collected during five-and-twenty years from his foster fathers and brothers of the English Franciscans.

Arrival of the Minorites in England, September 11, A.D. 1224; land at Dover, four clerks and five laymen; their names and quality. Had been carried across for charity by the monks of Fescamp; entertained two days at the Priory of the Holy Trinity, Canterbury; four start for London; five entertained at the Priests' Hospital there. Their scanty fare; other instances of like hardship.¹ In one place at the arrival of visitors the warden borrowed a pot of ale for the strangers, and he and his friars made believe to drink; in London the drink was sourer than vinegar. The four who had started for London entertained fifteen days by the Black Friars; have a house in Cornhill, and make separate cells, stuffing the interstices with dry grass; are without a common chapel. About November 1st two of them start for Oxford, and live at a house in St. Ebbs'; thence to Northampton, p. 9; where they have a house in the parish of St. Giles's. Their first converts: Friar Salomon, procurator for his house, begs of his sister, who curses the hour she had ever seen him; made an acolyte by Stephen Langton, Archbishop of Canterbury; is entertained by the archbishop; returns barefooted in the deep snow; falls ill, and cannot stir for two years; is visited by Jordanus, the Master of the Dominicans, and the surgeon advises amputation of the foot; when the axe is to be applied, and the foot is uncovered, the fester breaks; he is sent abroad, recovers, becomes warden of London, and confessor-general to the city; breaks his spine and becomes humpbacked; visited with great agonies; has a vision of Jesus Christ and St. Peter; is rebuked by them; his pains vanish, p. 13. How the Devil threw a handful of lice at Friar Gilbert de Vyz. William of London, famous arte scissoria, and a friend of Hubert de Burgh, received; Joyce of Cornhill, a clerk and two priests, with Philip of London, afterwards Warden of Bruges, finally of Ireland. Others joined in great numbers, p. 16. The devotion of the people towards them increases; find powerful friends at Canterbury; and at London, where lands are given for their use by the burgesses, 17.

William Joymer builds them a chapel; Peter de Elyland leaves them money for an infirmary; Henry de Frowyke and Salekin de Basing, an aqueduct; others a library. At Oxford Robert le Mercer lets them a house; Richard le Muliner gives the burgesses for their use a plot of ground and a house. At Cambridge the burgesses gave them an old church near the jail, p. 19, where they afterwards built a small wooden chapel, the carpenter in one day putting up fifteen couple of beams. At Shrewsbury the king gives them a plot of ground, and Richard Pride, a burgess, builds them a church; they remove the stone walls of their dormitory substituting clay.

Their strict and holy life, p. 20; their cheerfulness, p. 21; a young friar at Oxford rebuked in a vision for being too much given to laughing; their earnestness in obeying the orders of their superior and accepting missions in most desolate spots; their zeal in teaching and preaching; visiting barefooted the schools of theology, however remote, 22. ¹ On comparing this fragment of Thomas Eccleston's treatise (now printed by permission of Sir Charles Isham, Bart., of Lamport Hall) with the corresponding portion of the complete text published by Professor Brewer in Vol. I., the various readings will be found to be very numerous. Many, however, being trivial, it has been thought sufficient for the purposes of the present edition to indicate the more important differences. The York MS. is throughout quoted from Professor Brewer's edition.

Postea conduxerunt sibi domum in parochia Sanctæ Abbæ,⁴ et ibi manserunt sine cantaria usque ad æstatem sequentem. Ibi seminavit dulcis Jesu granum sinapis, quod postea factum est majus omnibus oleribus. Inde profecti sunt Frater R. de Ingwrd et Frater R. Devoniensis Norhamtonam, et recepti sunt in hospitali. Postea conduxerunt sibi domum in parochia Sancti Egidii, ubi fuit gardianus primo Frater Petrus Hispanus, qui loricam ferream portavit ad carnem, et alia plurima perfectionis exempla monstravit. De Primitiva Puritate Fratrum.

Primitias autem Spiritus habentes fratres illius temporis, non humanis constitutionibus sed liberis suæ devotionis affectionibus, regula tantum contenti et paucissimis aliis statutis, quæ post confirmationem regulæ eodem anno primitus⁵ emanaverant, Domino serviebant. Hæc autem fuit prima constitutio, quam Sanctus Franciscus fecit post regulam bullatam, sicut dixit bonæ memoriæ Frater Albertus; scilicet quod fratres inter sæculares non comederent, nisi tres bolos carnis⁶ propter observantiam sancti Evangelii; quia venerat ad eum rumor quod fratres avidè comedebant. Fratres igitur silentium usque ad tertiam tenere consueverunt, et in oratione tam assidui esse, ut vix esset aliqua hora per totam noctem, in qua non essent aliqui fratres in oratione in oratorio. In præcipuis quoque solempnitatibus tanto fervore cantaverunt, ut per totam noctem nonnunquam durarent vigiliæ; et cum non⁷ essent nisi tres vel quatuor aut⁸ ut multum sex, cum nota solempniter cecinerunt. Tanta quoque fuit simplicitas eorum, tantaque puritas, ut de pollutione nocturna in capitulo¹ coram omnibus dicerent culpas suas. Inoleverat etiam inter eos tam religiosa consuetudo, ut nihil penitus jurarent, sed simpliciter dicerent, "Sciatis." Quam cito quisquam vel a superiore vel socio fuisset increpatus,² statim respondit "Mea culpa," et frequenter etiam prostratus. Unde magister Prædicatorum bonæ memoriæ Frater Jordanus dixit, quod Diabolus, cum aliquando ei apparuisset, dixerat ei quod "Mea culpa" abstulit ei quicquid lucrari credidit inter Fratres Minores, quia scilicet dicebant culpas suas³ invicem, si quis alium offendisset. Fuerunt tamen fratres omni tempore inter se ita jocundi et læti, ut vix in aspectu mutuo se temperarent⁴ a risu. Unde cum juvenes fratres Oxoniæ nimis frequenter riderent, injunctum fuit cuidam ut quotiens rideret in choro vel in mensa⁵ tot reciperet disciplinas. Accidit autem ut cum undecim⁶ disciplinas in una die recepisset, nec tamen posset se a risu cohibere,⁷ visum fuit⁸ ei quadam nocte, quod totus conventus more solito stetit in choro, et temptabantur⁹ fratres ridere more solito, et ecce crucifixus, qui stetit ad ostium chori, convertit se ad eos quasi vivus, et ait: "Filii Choræ sunt qui in "hora cantus rident et dormiunt." Videbatur etiam ei quod crucifixus nitebatur extrahere manus suas a patibulo, quasi volens descendere et recedere; et ecce custos loci statim ascendit et confirmavit clavos, ita quod non descendit. Hac igitur visione publicata terribi fratres maturius, et sine risu notabili se¹⁰ gerebant. In tantum autem veritatem zelabant, ut vix hyperbolicè aliquid loqui auderent, vel etiam propria delicta, cum tamen se puniendos scirent si confiterentur,¹ celarent. In locis vero capiendis, vel moram faciendo in jam captis, nulla fuit eis difficultas, vel aliis quibuscunque qualitercunque exsequendis, dummodo sic a suo superiori scirent ordinatum. Unde accidit ut in locis qui desolatorii nunc temporis dicebantur, fratres tam nobiles genere quam aliis conditionibus, in sæculo spectabiles et in ordine gratiosissimi, sine querela se poni permetterent. Hoc solummodo suavissimum cordis eorum contristare videbatur affectum, quod ab invicem separari oportebat. Unde frequenter usque ad partes remotas fratres recedentes conducebant, et effusis abunde² in recessu lacrimis, affectionis fidem mutuo demonstabant.

De Promotione Prædicatorum.

Their activity in teaching and preaching.

Licet autem fratres summæ simplicitati et conscientiae puritati summopere studerent in omnibus, in audienda tamen lege divina et scholasticis exercitiis ita fuerunt ferventes, ut scholas theologiæ, quantumcunque distarent, adire quotidie nudis pedibus in frigoris asperitate et luti profunditate non pigrarentur. Unde, cooperante gratia Spiritus Sancti, ad officium prædicationis infra breve tempus plures promoti sunt. Cum vidisset ergo Fratres Minores Parisius,⁵ memor istius visionis resumpsit vires, et erigens se contra se, socium suum magistrum⁶ Symonem de Sandwyz et duos alios famosos [magistros] sagaciter induxit, ut ipso celebrante missam, ipsi a Domino Jesu Christo peterent, quid sibi consultius foret⁷ ad salutem. Cumque simul omnibus Minorum professio complaceret, accesserunt, ad majorem securitatem, ad sanctæ memoriæ Fratrem ante 1237. Venit etiam tunc Frater Henricus de Reresby; qui postea fuit datus in ministrum Scotiæ, cum esset vicarius custodis Oxoniæ, sed præventus fuit morte. Qui apparuit post mortem suam custodi, dicens quod “ licet non damnarentur fratres pro excessu quem facerent in ædificiis, tamen graviter puniebantur:” et addidit quod, “ si fratres dicerent bene officium divinum, essent oves apostolorum.”

Venit quoque in Angliam tunc temporis Frater Martinus de Bartona, qui beatum Franciscum frequenter videre meruit; qui postea vicarius fuit ministri Angliæ, et in multis aliis officiis optime se habuit. Ipse narravit, quod in capitulo generali, in quo præcipit Sanctus Franciscus destrui domum, quæ fuerat ædificata propter capitulum, fuerunt quinque millia fratrum. Hic novitium quendam in conventu suo habuit, qui temptabatur exire ordinem: a quo tandem vix obtinuit ut ad ministrum secum ire vellet. Et si ex nunc forsitan facultas eis restituendi affuerit, id facere non postponent."

Fratres nihilominus prædictos juvabunt efficaciter sub forma inter eos conventa, quæ inferius continetur, quantum poterunt ad rehabendum apostatam memoratum. Præmissam quidem protestationem et confessionem in omnibus et per omnia, ut superius est expressum, fieri faciet dictus Abbas infra terminum memoratum, sub pœna trecentarum librarum sterlingorum solvendarum extunc in subsidium Terræ Sanctæ, si defecerit in præmissis vel aliquo præmissorum.

Item dictus Abbas Westmonasterii et cæteri monachi de conventu, qui suspecti habentur a fratribus super dimissione dicti apostatæ postquam inter eos fuerat receptatus, vel circa hoc dicuntur fraudem vel dolum commisisse, sicut a ministro Angliæ, custode, et guardiano Londoniæ, vel altero eorum de mandato ministri fuerint nominati, purgabunt se super hoc per iuramentum corporale in ecclesia Westmonasterii, præsentibus dictis Fratribus Minoribus vel altero eorundem, si requisiti voluerint interesse, citra festum beati Michaelis venturum proximo, coram magistris W. de Monteforti decano Sancti Pauli Londoniæ, Radulpho¹ archidiacono Middelsexiæ, Giffrido de Vesano, aut duobus vel uno eorum, si alii nollent vel non possent commode interesse.

Item tam Abbas quam conventus teneantur ex nunc prædictos fratres efficaciter juvare sano consilio et fidei ad rehabendum dictum apostatam sine dolo et qualibet fictione; nihil celaturi a fratribus per quod hujusmodi restitutio facienda impediri poterit vel differri, sed potius restitutionem ipsam, quantum in eis erit, fideliter et celeriter procurabunt, invocato ad hoc, si necesse fuerit, auxilio brachii sæcularis.

Item Abbas Westmonasterii prædictus, infra festum Nativitatis Dominicæ venturum proximo, personaliter adibit dominum Johannem, Dei gratia Cantuariæ Archiepiscopum, tanquam conservatorem privilegiorum ordinis Fratrum Minorum; ita quod per præsentationem hujus-

Dominus vero Archiepiscopus occasione hujusmodi humilitatis nullam jurisdictionem aliam habeat in Abbatem quam habebat, vel habiturus esset si illa facta penitus non fuisset.

Si autem dictus Abbas dictam humiliationem non fecerit infra præscriptum terminum in forma superius annotata, extunc teneatur prædicto domino Archiepiscopo dare centum marcas sterlingorum in pios usus, pro ipsius arbitrio dispensandas. A.D. 1291.

Item, prædictus Abbas fideliter et integre restituet ordini fratrum omnes libros quos dictus apostata asportavit, et hoc infra mensem postquam per fratres super hoc fuerit requisitus, nisi jam fuerint ordini restituti. (vii.) That the abbot shall restore all books carried away by the apostate.

Item quia diversi amici ordinis graves et varias expensas fecerunt hactenus circa prosecutionem dicti negotii, ad quarum solutionem fratres non sufficiunt, præfatus Abbas pro refusione hujusmodi expensarum assignabit alias centum marcas sterlingorum illis, quos minister Angliæ ad hoc deputaverit, infra festum Sancti Michaelis de mense Septembris venturo proximo. De qua quantitate solum expensas factas per ipsos amicos citra quantitatem prædictam centum marcarum minister valeat retinere, de quibus suo simplici verbo credatur. Et si aliquid superfuerit restitui faciat Abbati et conventui memoratis, nisi idem minister dictas expensas pro parte aliqua duxerit remittendas. (viii.) That the said abbot shall pay expenses incurred by friends of the Friars respecting the present matter up to a total of 100 marks.

Item, quia præfatus dominus Abbas multum turbavit ordinem fratrum, et præcipue in provincia Anglicana, teneatur personaliter venire ad proximum provinciale capitulum quod erit Londoniæ, si in Anglia fuerit et commode poterit, ut recolligat fratres, et recolligatur a fratribus in visceribus caritatis; promittendo eis fideliter quod eos de cætero nullatenus molestabit, sed inter monachos et fratres habeatur caritas, quasi nulla dissentio præcessisset, et imponatur utrique silentium super præteritis. REGULA SANCTI FRANCISCI.

REGULA SANCTI FRANCISCI.

[An early English translation of the Rule taken from the Cottonian MS. Faustina D. IV. This manuscript belonged to John Howell, probably a Franciscan Friar. It is in handwriting of the 15th century.]

HONORY bisshop, seruant of the sarvauntis of God, to his welbeloued sonnys Brother Fraunces and to alle other brotherne of the order of the bretherne mynorrys sendith gretynge and the Apostillis blessinge. The Appostellis set ys wont and accustomyde to graunt meke peticionnys, and to enclyne and give benivolent faouere to meke requestis and honest desires. Therefore, welbelouyd sonnys in God, we, enclynyng and assentyng to your meke requestis and devowt desires, by the Appostellys auctorytee fortifie and conferme to you the rewle of your orderre appoynted of goode remembrance by Pope Innocent our predecessoure, conteyned and annotid in this present writynge, the whiche ys this:—

In the name of God: here begynneth the rewle and the lif of the bretherne minoris, the first chapter.

The rewle and lif of the bretherne mynorrys is this, to obserue and kepe the holy gospelle of our Lord Jhesu Christ [A vowe] in lyving in obedience, [A vowe] without propre, [A vowe] and in chastite. Broþer Fraunces promyseth obedience and reuerence to the lord Honory, Pope, and to his successours laufully enteryng, and to the church of Rome; [Havyng the strenkith of a commaundement] and alle other bretherne be bownde to obey vnto brother Fraunces and to his successours.

[Of them that wille resceiue this lyf, and in what maner they may be resceyved: The ij^{de} chapter. A conditioun.] Yf any that will resceiue this lyf comme to oure bretherne, let them send them to ther mynysters provinciallis, vnto whom only, and to none other, licence ys grauntyd to resceyve bretherne. [A condition.] The mynysters dilygently shall examynthem of the Crystene feithe, and of the sacramentis of the churche. [A condition.] The mynysters dilygently shall examyne, and yf they stedfastly beleve in them, and will truly and feithfully graunt and confesse them, and to the ende of ther lyf stedfastly kepe them: [A condition] and yf they haue no wifys: [A condition] or yf they have wyfes and ther wifys be nowe entred in to somme monastery in religioun, or haue gyven them licence, by the auctorite of the bisshope dyocessanne, the vowe of chastyte by them promysed; [A condition] and yf ther wyfes be of suche age that of them may ryse no maner of suspicion: [A condition] let them say too them the wordis of the holy gospelle, [A conditioun] that ys to say that they go and selle all ther goodis, and indever them self to distrybute them to poor people, [A condition] the whiche if they may not doo yt suffisethe ther goode wille. [An exhortacion or forbeding.] And the bretherne shalbe wel ware that they medle not nor enbesy them self with ther temporalle goodis or procuryng therof, [a condition] that they may frely do ther with what so euer God putteth or enspireth in ther myndis. [A condition.] Nevertheles, if counselle be desired and askyd of them therein, the mynisteris haue licence to send them vnto somme persones dredyng God, by whose counselle ther goodis may be distrybuted and givenne to poor people. [Equyvalent.] Then, after this, they shall graunt to them the clothyng of probation, that ys to say ij. cootis withoute a hode, a corde, a femoralle, a schapelet downe too the girdle. [A condicion.] But yf yt be thowghte expedient too the seide mynisters godly otherwise to be done or dispensyd at summe tyme, [a conditioun] but¹ yf it be thoughte expedient to the seid mynisters godly other-

vii. And they shall pray for them that be ded. [Equivalent to a commaundment.] And they shall fast from the fest of alle halowtyde vnto the nativyte of oure Lorde. [A liberte.] The holy xl. dayes whiche begynne after the fest of the epiphanye of our Lord vnto the ende of contynuell xl. daies next folowing, whiche oure Lord consecrate with his holy fastynge, those þat wilfully doo fast hit blessid be they of oure Lord, and they that wilnot be nat bownde ther too, [Equivalent to a commaundment,] but they shalle fast the other Lent vnto the resurrectioun of oure Lorde. [A libertee.] At other seasons they be nat bownde to fast, [Hawynge the strenghte of a commaundment] but on the fridayer. [A libertee.] And in manyfest necessite the bretherne be not bownde to corporalle abstinence or bodily fastyng. [An exortacion.] I cownsell also warne and exhorte my bretherne in oure Lorde Jhesu Criste that they bralle nat, nor strive in ther wordis or communication, nor that they juge norre deme none other men; [An admonicion] but that thei be meke, peasible, softe, gentille and curteis, and lowly, honestly spekyng and answeyng to euery manne as vntoo them accordith and belongith. [Equivalent to a commaundment.] And they shalnot ride, but yf they be constrayned by evident necessitee or ellis by sekenesse. [An admonycion.] In to what house or place someuer they enter they shalle saye firste, "pece be vnto this howse." [A liberte.] And, accordynge too the holy gospelle, they maye ete of all maner of mettis whiche be sette before them.

[That the bretherne may not resceive any coyne or money. The iiiiith chapter. A commaundement.]

[I] commande stedfastly and straitly too all the bretherne that in no wise they resceive any maner of coyne or money, nother by them self nor by none other meane person. Neuertheles for the necessite of the seke bretherne, and for the other bretherne to be clothid or nedynge clothinge, by goostly and spirituelle frendis, the mynysters oonly and the custodyes or wardens shalle haue diligent cure and charge accordyng to the placis, too the tymes or seasons, and to the colde cowntreis and regions ; lyke as yt shall seme them expedient too ther necessite or nede. [Equyvalent to a commandment.] Savyng this alwaies that lyke as yt is before saide they may nat resceiue ony maner of coyne or money.

[The maner how the bretherne shall vse and occupie them self in bodily labour. The v. chapter. An admonicyoun.]

The bretherne too whom God hath gyven grace and strenghte to labowr shalle laboure truly and deuoutly, so and in suche whiche¹ that Idlenes, the enemy of the soule, excluded and put away, they quenche not the inward feruour and sprite of holy prayer and devocoun wherunto alle transetory and temporalle thyngis oughte deserue and geve place. [An admonycioun]. As of the hier and availe for ther laboure, they may resceiue for them self and for ther bretherne those thinggis that be necessary and nedefulle to ther bodies, [Equyvalent to a commaundment] except coyne or money. [An exhortacioun]. And that louly and mekely, as appartainith and belongith the saruauntis of God and the trewe folouaris of most parfyte and holy pouerte.

[Howe that the bretherne may not appropre to them ony thinge in any maner of wyse. And of almes to be asked, and of the charitee to be done to the seke bretherne. The vi. chapter. Equivalent to a commaundment.]

[T]he bretherne shall nothyng appropre to them, nother in howsing nor in londis, nor in rent nor in any maner of thyng, but lyke pilgrimis and strangers in this world, in pouerte and mekenes, saruyng Almyghty God. [An admonicyoun]. They shalle feithefully, boldly, and surely and mekely goo for almys [An admonicion] Nor they shalnot nor owghte not to be ashamed, for our Lord made hym self poor in this worlde. [An admonicion] This is the highe dignite of most profounde and highe pouertee, the whiche hath institute and ordeynde you, most dere bretherne, kyngis and inheretours of the kyngdom of hevyne; hit hath made you poor and bare in temporall goodis, and exaltid and promoted you in vertuowse and heuently riches. [An admonicyon.] This shulde be your portioun the whiche wille lede you too the londe of quycke and luyng people. [An admonicioun.] To whiche, my most welbelouyd bretherne, vtterly knytte and conjoyned, you shalle neuer desire other thyng vnder Jhesu for the loue of our Lord Jesu Christe. [An admonicyoun.] And wher someuer ony of the brethern fynde other they shall sheire and vse them self to gether as bretherne of oone howse, and euery of them too other sholde surely shew his necessite and nede; for why, if the modrenorysche and loue the carnall and naturalle sone or child, [An admonicyoun] howe moche more diligently, tenderly, and inwardly sholde euery brother loue and cherisse his spirituall brother. [Equivalent to a commandment.] And yf ony of them falle in sekenes or disease the other bretherne shalle attende, serue, and kepe hym lyke as they wolde be saruyd, attendid, and kepte there owne self.

[Of penaunce to be enjoyned to the bretherne fallynge in synne. The vii. chapter. Having the strenghte of a commandment.]

Yf ony of the brethern, by the enty¹ or instigioun of the goostly enemy, falle in to dedly synne, for ther synnys, for the whiche yt is ordeyned amonge the bretherne that they shall goo and have recourse oonly to the mynisters provinciallis, the forsaid bretherne be bownde to goo and haue recourse vnto them as shortly as they may, without oney tariynge. [An admonicyoun.] And the seid minysters, yf they prestis, shall enjoyne them penaunce with compassioun and pitee. [Equyvalent to a commandment.] And, if they be no prestis them self, they shalle make pennaunce to be enjoyed to them by oþer prestis of ther ordre, lyke as yt shalbe thowghte by them after charite most expedyent. [An exhortacion.] And they owghte to be welle ware that they benot troublid or angry for any brothers offence; for whi, angre and troble of the mynd lettith cherite in them self and in other.

[Of the election of the generalle minyster of this fraternyte, and of the chapter of Whitsontide. The viii. chapiter.]

Alle the bretherne ar bownde to have oone of this religioun to ther generall minyster and seruaunt of this fraternitee, [Equyvalent to a commandment] and they arre bounde stedfastly to obey vnto hym, [Hauyng the strenghte of a commaundment] after whose decesse the electyoun of his successoure must be had by the mynisters provynciallis and the custodies at the chapter of Whitsontide; [Hauyng the strenght of a commaundment] in whiche chapiter alle the bretherne, beyng mynisters, ar bownd alwayes to assemble and gather togethers wherfore somever yt shalbe ordeynd or appoynted by the generalle mynistre, and that oons in thre yere, or at ony other tyme more or lesse, lyke as yt shalbe ordeynd and appoynted by the seid generalle minyster. [Hauyng the strenghte of commaundment]. And yf yt seme and appere at ony tyme to the vniuersalle congregatioun of mynisters prouynciallis and custodies the foreseid mynistre not to be sufficyent and able for that office and expedient to that seruyce, and commynne welthe of the bretherne, the forseid bretherne too whome the electioun ys given and belongith ar bownd in the nam of Allemyghty God too choose them a nother to ther minister. [A liberte.] And after the chapter of Whitsontyde the ministeris and the custodies may ons the same yere, euery of them in ther custodies, gather too gether ther bretherne to chapter, if thei thyncke yt necessary and expedient.

[Of the prechers. The ix. chapter.]

The bretherne shalle not preche in the dioces of ony bisshop when yt ys of hym to them forbedyn, [Equivalent to a commaundment] and none of the bretherne shalbe so bolde to preche to the peple but yf he be of þe generalle minister of this brethered examyned, approuyd, and admitted of hym to the office of prechyng. [An admonicyon.] I warne, also require and exhorte, the same bretherne that in ther prechyng ther wordis and speche be examyned and chaste to þe profite and edifying of the people, shewyng to them viciis and vertuis, payne and joye, with with few wordis; for whi, our Lord made but short prechyng and sermonnys here vppon erthe.

[Of the admonicyon and correction of the bretherne. The xth chapter. An admonicion.]

The bretherne whiche be the mynisters and seruauntis of the other breþern shalle visyt and monysche or warne ther bretherne, and mekely and charitably they shall correcte them, nat bidding or commaundyng them anythyng that is contrary to ther solle helthe and ageynst our rewle. [An admonicyon.] The bretherne also whiche be subjectis sholde remembre that they for Goddis sake and loue of Almyghti God haue denyed and forsaken ther willis. [A commaundement.] Wheruppon I straytly commaunde them that they obey to ther ministers in alle thing whiche they haue promised to oure Lorde that be nat contrary to ther soule helthe and agenst our rewle. [Equivalent to a commaundment.] And whersoever ony bretherne be whiche know and perceyve themself that they cannot spirituelly and gostly, and according to their soule helthe, kepe ther rewle they may and shalle haue recourse to þer minysters.

[An admonicioun]. And ther minysters, charitably and lauffully, louyngly shalle resceive them, and so mucche familiarite or fauor they shall shewe vntoo them that they may say and do like as lordis vnto ther seruantis, for sothly yt sholde be soo that the minysters shold be saruauntis of all the bretherne. [An exortation.] I warne also and exhorte my bretherne in our Lord Jhesu Crist that they be welle war from alle maner of pride, vaine glorie, enuye, and malice, from cure and charge of this worlde, and all worldly besynes, and from detraction and murmuration. [An exhortacion.] And thos that be vn-lernyd shalnot besye themself to be lettred and lernyd; [An admonicion] but they shold attende and take hede aboue alle thingis, and desire to haue the sprite of our Lorde and his holy operation, too pray alwayes to almyghty God with a pure spirite and a clene herte: [An admonycioun] and to haue lowlynes and meknes, and paciens in trouble and persecution and in sekenes, and to loue them whiche vexith, trowblith, and pursueth vs, and that reprouyth, chalengeth, and rebuketh vs; for why, our Lord saith [An admonicion] loue your enemyes and pray for them that pursuith and chalengith or rebukith you. Blessid and happye be they the whiche suffer troble and persecution for justis and rithewisenes, for whiche they be ordeynd to be inheretors and possessours of the kyngdome of heuyn. Whosoeuer perseuerith and commyth too the ende he shal be sauyd.

[That the bretherne enter not in to the place or monastery of nonnys. The xith chapter. A commandment.]

I commaund stedfastly and straitly to alle the bretherne that they have no suspect or suspiciuse felowshipe or company, or suspecte counselles or communication, with wymmen: [A commandment] nor that they entre not in to the placis or monasteries of nonnys, except those too whom especialle licence ys grauntyd from the courte of Rome. [A commaundment.] Nor they may not be god fadres or gossips of men or wymen, lest therby rumor or slaundre shold ryse of the bretherne amongis the bretherne.

[Of them that will or entend to goo amonge the Sarasyns, or vnfeithfull peple. The xij. chapter. A liberte.]

[W]hoso euer of the bretherne, by divyne inspiration, will go amonge the Sarasyns or other infidelys, [A commaundment] they shall axe licence therof of their mynisters prouinciallis, [A commaundment] and the ministers shall not give lycence to none of the bretherne too goo but to suche as they think and juge to be sadde and hable and sufficyent to be sent. [A commaundment.] Thes thinggis by obedience I enjoyne vntoo the ministers that they axe and requyre oone of the cardinalis of the Pope and of the holy churche of Rome, the whiche shalbe gouerner, defendre, and protector and corrector of this fraternyte, [A commaundment] that we, alwaies beyng subjectis and subdued vndre the fete of the same holy chirche, beyng stedfast and stable in the catholike and Cristen feithe, that we may truly kepe pouerte and mekenes and the holy gospelle of oure Lord Jhesù Crist whiche we haue stedfastly and straitly vowed and promysed.

[The conclusioun of the confirmatioun.]

And therfor in no wise yt shalbe lawfulle to ony manne to breke or withstonde this chartoure or writyng of our confirmatioun, or too contrary yt, or to do ageynste yt by boldnes and presumption, or by temerous audacyte, in ony maner of thyng, for who so euer be so hardy to doo or presume and take in hande or in suche wise to do, he shalle knowe and vndrestond hymself that therby he fallith or runnith in to the grete indignatioun of Almyghty God and of his blessid Apostellis Petre and Polle.

Gyven at Lateranence the thrid kalendas of Decembre, the eithte yere of owre Pontificacie.

[Here endith the rewle and the lif of the meke bretherne.]

Here foloweth a good note vppon the v. chapter of ower rewle, etc. :—

In the v. chapter of ower rewle ower holy father seynt Francys sayth theys wordys here folowyng:— Suche maner of brotherne vnto whom ouer Lorde hath geven grace for to laboure thei shalle laboure faithfully and devowtly, neuerthelese in suche maner wyse that the quenche nott nor put oute the spyryt of deuocion.

Aboute the firste parte in the declarynge of this chapter, that ys that the brothern sholde laboure, we muste knowe whether this sayinge be a commaundment, ammonycion, or informacion; and for an answer of this same yt may be sayde after the saying of Pope Nicholas, that yt ys no commaundment, for yf that yt were a commaundment yt shulde bynd euery brother too the obseruance of the same. The contrary therefore showith Pope Nicholas in saying these wordys, yt was neuer the mynde of seynt Frawncis, the wiche ordenyde the saide rule, that suche brothern wiche be occupide in study, or dyvyne seruyce or office, shulde be bownde vnto bodely labour, for asmyche as, after the exemple of Cryste and of other holy seyntis, ther laboure ys for to be vnderstonde spycialle laboure: but vnto the other wiche be nott exercysed in suche laboure, seynt Frauncis speketh those wordis as gevyng a comaundment, lest perauenture they sholde haue lyuen idely, or ellys, as saiyth Pope Nicolas, yf that the forsayde lay brothern be occupied in lawfulle besynese or offyce of other brothern, so that they deserue to be susteyned wyth other, also but yff the forsayde lay brothern be of so noble and excellent contemplacion that in no maner of wysse they shulde be put away frome so good and meke exercise ; but peraventure some wylle say, seynt Frawnces sayith in hys testament that he wolde labour with his handys or bodely, and wolde also that alle maner of brothern sholde labour in suche wyse ; to the wiche saying answerd brother Hugo in hys exposicion vppon the rewle, that in the begynnyng of the order there were fewe brothern that were lernyde or that toke hede to study, but moost parte of theym were gevyn vnto labour bodely, and therefore to alle suche brotherne, leste they sholde lyue ydely, sent Frauncys sayde that he wolde they shold labour bodely.

As for towchyng the first poynte of the v. chapter, secondaryly, we muste knowe what ys to be vnderstonde too those wordys, "they that haue grace to labour," yt may be answerid and sayd, the haue grace to labour wyche haue diligens, counnyng, and vse of laborynge with helthe of body helpyng therto, also in suche maner of wyse that they lett nott or be impedement vntoo other, for seynt Jherom sayth he shalle, that ys the seruant of God shold, always be occupied in goodnes, that the mortalle enmye the deuylle, fynd hym alle ways besy. And in what maner and howe they shold labour saynt Frauncys showeth, saying they shalle labour faythfully as too ther nayboure or for theyr brother, and deuowtely as to God ; that they shalle haue good wylle in their deuocion, a righte intencyon, and in doying ther of discrecyoun. And so lyke wyse that in puttyng oute of idlenes, enemy vnto mannys soule, the put not oute the spyrite of deuocyon, in wyche saying, thowghe that seynt Francys shewyth idelnese too cast a way, yet he sayth that the spirite of deuocion owghte not to be put oute with suche labour, for he that ys a relygion man shuld nott for doying of bodely labour leve those prarers¹ vn-

sayd wich be necessary for to be sayde, as ys ther seruyce etc. But there were many brothern, and be yt many in the order of seynt Francys, wiche, when they be callyd to any labour or put ther too, they arme them selfe with the wordys of seynt Francys, and say they sholde not be put too such labour lest they hurte or put oute the spirite of deuocyon or prayer; as sayth the glose vppon seynt Luke, a man sholde praye always; but yt ys to be vnderstonde that he neuer seasith prayinge the wiche neuer seasith in doying welle. And also brother Egidius sayth, that he wiche doith the commandment of hys prelate he prayth. But suche maner of brothern be not excusid in ther saying, but rather accusyd therin, for by cause the thynke that suche spiryte, not exercisid as of obedience and other lyke, shuld not be reputyd amongst thyngis of deuocion. But yt may be askyd, what yt ys to be vnderstonde be puttyng [out] the spirite of deuocyon. He puttyth out the spyryte of deuocyon the wiche castyth away reason and foloweth the world, the flesche, and the deuylle. Wherefore the word of oure holy father be to be vnderstonde, that they shuld soo labour that they leue nott thoo thyngis vndoone vnto the wiche they be bond, nor seyke suche temporalle thyngis wiche be for byddyn vnto them, for in so doying they synne dedly and quenche the spiryte of deuocion.

A questyon ys askyd, what thyng the brothern may receyue for ther labour, for asmyche as yt ys for byd vnto them to resceyu[e] coyne or money.

The iiij. masters answere and sayith, that nother the may resceyue gold or siluer, nor eny mater or pryce, as by skynnys, wulle, and such other, for the recepcion of them bryngeth in propertye: nor also they that shold not resceyue other wiche be not of pryce as the forsayd be, that by laborynge in them they may gett other thyngis that be of pryce, but they shold doo the laboure and cunnyng in a-nother mannys mater for to gett such thyngis as be necessarye for theym, and that after the sayinge of seynt Francis, wiche sayth that they shalle reseceyue suche thyngis as be necessarye for the bodye in stede of coyne or money, nor also they may not make any covenant or bargeyn before what they wylle haue for ther laboure. Finis.

DE NOVITIORUM RECEPTIONE ET INSTRUCTIONE.

Primum capitulum.

Statuimus imprimis, quod qui venientem ad ordinem nostrum debet in fratrem recipere diligenter inquirat et attendat sollicite quod recipiendus, ut docet regula, sit fidelis et catholicus, de nullo errore suspectus, matrimonio non ligatus, corpore sanus, animo promptus, legitime natus, debitis expeditus, conditione liber, ætatem attingens xvi annorum ad minus, nulla infamia vulgari maculatus, competenter literatus, vel ad labores fratribus honestos et utiles aptus, aut talis conditionis existens quod ejus receptio clero et populo non modicam ædificationem afferat.¹

Conditions to be fulfilled by all persons entering as novices.

Si quis autem aliter receptus fuerit, non admittatur ad professionem sine generalis vel provincialis vicarii licentia speciali cum consilio discretorum.

Of persons admitted in contravention of rules.

Porro laici non recipiantur ad ordinem absque licentia generalis vicarii; et nullus pro laico recipiatur omnino citra vicesimum annum, nec ultra quadragesimum, nisi esset persona multum notabilis vel insignis, de cujus receptione esset ædificatio magna in clero et in populo.

Restrictions on admission of laymen.

Nec aliquis de laicatu ad clericatum ascendat sine assensu capituli generalis. Si autem, juxta quod regula concedit, vicarius cum aliquibus clericis vel laicis dispensaret, ut probationis caputium minime portarent, fiat eis tunc juridica protestatio per illos,

No mendicant friars to be admitted. Inhibemus etiam quod nullus professus in ordine mendicantium ad nostrum ordinem recipiatur. Quod si secus actum fuerit, hujusmodi receptio irrita sit et inanis.

Persons admitted from other orders must have the permission of their superiors. Nec de non mendicantibus aliquis recipiatur nisi prius a suo superiore licentia postulata, duntaxat et non obtenta.

Bonifacius Papa octavus. Volentes vestro aggregari consortio qui suspensionis aut interdicti vel excommunicationum sententiis a jure vel a iudice generaliter sunt ligati, absolutionis beneficium, observata forma canonica, impartiri, ipsosque in fratres recipere; et eos, qui post assumptum habitum vel professionem præmissam recoluerint se talibus in sæculo fuisse sententiis innodatos, secundum formam ipsam vos, generalis et provinciales ministri, ac præfati custodes, et vicés vestras gerentes, valeatis absolvere, et cum eis in irregularitatibus dispensare, si talibus forsitan fuerint sententiis innodati, vel in locis interdicto suppositis divina præsumpsissent officia celebrare, vel ordines recipere, ita tamen quod si aliqui ex iisdem hujusmodi sententiis propter debitum sint astricti, iidem satisfaciant prout tenentur.

Volumus nihilominus quod volentes hujusmodi vestro aggregari consortio, nisi mox postquam fuerint absoluti ordinem vestrum intraverint, etiam si adhuc induciæ a prælatis ejusdem ordinis concederentur, eo ipso in pristinas sententias, a quibus eos absolvi contigerat, relabantur.²

Of admission to full profession. Capitulum generale. Completo vero anno probationis, si novitii a fratribus cum quibus fuerint conversati habeant laudabile testimonium, de generalis vel provincialis vicarii [licentia] a suis custodibus vel guardianis ad professionem recipi possunt; quam quilibet novitius, cum ad professionem recipitur, faciat in hunc modum :—

Ego, Frater N., voveo et promitto Deo, et Beatæ Vow. Mariæ Virgini, et beato Francisco, et omnibus sanctis, et tibi, pater, toto tempore vitæ meæ servare regulam Fratrum Minorum per dominum Honorium Papam confirmatam, vivendo in obedientia, sine proprio, et in castitate.

Et qui eum recipit promittat ei, si hæc observaverit, vitam æternam. Et hæc receptio fiat in capitulo vel alibi coram fratribus congregatis.

Hujusmodi autem novitii ante professionem sint expropriati omnino, et nihil pro se in testamento vel alias faciant reservari.

Si autem conversatio alicujus novitii fuerit dubia apud fratres, ejus ad professionem receptio provinciali vicario penitus reservetur.

Nullus autem novitius. pro clerico ad professionem recipiatur, nisi totum officium divinum sciat dicere per seipsum. Illi vero qui jam sunt recepti, vel in posterum contra præsentem ordinationem contigerit recipi, non promoveantur ad ordines sacros, nec ad aliquam præsentiam assumantur, antequam perfecte sciverint divinum officium ut est dictum. Si quis custos vel gardianus aliquem prædicta nescientem ad professionem recipere, vel ad ordines promoveri facere, præsumperit, puniatur graviter per vicarium.

Insuper ordinamus quod in quolibet conventu assignetur per tabulam provincialis congregationis magister novitiorum, et alius vel idem magister juvenum vicissimum quintum annum nondum attingentium, vir scilicet maturus, devotus, et discretus, qui super ipsorum curam invigilet diligenter.

A master of the novices and younger friars to be appointed in each convent.

Hujusmodi autem novitii suæ probationis tempore studio scholastico non intendant, sed divinum addicentes officium studio devotionis et orationis vigilanter insistant; nec ordines sacros suscipiant; nec confessiones audiant, si fuerint sacerdotes; nec portam con-

Secundum Capitulum.

Conduct during Divine Service.

Statuimus et ordinamus quod ante horarum et missarum principia fratres omnes, quos causa rationabilis non excusat, ad chorum conveniant, præparaturi Domino corda sua; ibique sine discursu, murmure, risu, et absque vagis et vanis aspectibus, sub silentio, et pace, et cum debita gravitate, permaneant, cantent, et orent, et usque in finem unanimiter perseverent. Hortamur quoque in Domino, ut divinas laudes integre, attente, honeste, ac religiose persolvant, gestus leves et cantus dissolutos seu fractos omnino declinent. Tractim psallant debito more incepta; quæ simul cantanda fuerint simul continent, simulque pausent. Et qui in his defectuosi fuerint, graviter puniantur.

De legendo autem sine nota in aliquibus conventibus seu locis fiat secundum dispositionem prælatorum.

Sileatur autem in claustro, in choro, in ecclesia a principio chori et supra, et in refectorio tam in prima mensa quam in secunda, et hoc non solum a residentibus sed etiam a forensibus observetur. In locis autem ubi fratres non habent officinas distinctas, loca distincta et commoda ab immediatis superioribus eorundem locorum assignentur,¹ ubi fratres sileant et ubi possint aliis loqui dum oportet. Similiter hora dormitionis a festo Resurrectionis Domini usque ad festum Exaltationis sanctæ Crucis qualibet die post secundam mensam pulsetur campanula refectorii ab eo qui legit ad mensam, et extunc sileatur usque ad nonam. In diebus vero jejuniorum simili modo a pulsata campanula post mensam secundam silentium observetur, donec fiat signum ad surgendum a somno secundum spatium a gardiano provide assignandum. Liceat tamen fratribus quod necesse est loqui breviter et submisse. Si quis autem silentium fregerit, debeat dicere in capitulo culpam suam, prout se in hoc deliquisse meminerit exprimendo, cui a gardiano abstinentia a vino, aut alia pœna secundum culpæ exigentiam, imponatur. Hortamur etiam ut fratres assuescant etiam ubique religiose et sine clamore loqui, et maxime in dormitorio. Et ut studio orationis major pateret² occasio, volumus quod singulis diebus a dicto completorio fratres omnes, præter infirmos ac forenses ac eis servientes, infra spatium comprehendens ecclesiam seu oratorium, claustrum, librariam, dormitorio, et secretæ necessitatis locum, usque ad primum signum primæ

Tertium Capitulum.

Regulations respecting clothing.

Rules respecting dimensions of habit.

Cum regula dicat quod fratres omnes vestimentis vilibus induantur, prout statutum bonæ memoriæ domini Fratris Bonaventuræ contineat, statuimus et ordinamus ut vestimentorum vilitas attendatur in pretio pariter et colore. In omnibus autem, quæ ad habitum fratrum spectant, ad imitationem patrum nostrorum semper in vestimentis reluceat asperitas, vilitas et paupertas. Ad majorem autem uniformitatem inter nos conservandam ordinamus, quod latitudo caputii habitus nostri non transeat a lateribus conum juncturæ humerorum; et quod longitudo ipsius caputii a parte posteriori cingulum non attingat. Longitudo vero habitus talis sit, quod fratris ipsum deferentis nullo modo excedat mensuram. Latitudo autem ultra sedecim palmarum mensuram non protendatur ad plus, nec minus quam xiiii. palmas habeat, nisi notabilis corpulentia alicujus in latitudine amplius requirat iudicio gardiani. Longitudo vero manicarum cooperiat extremam juncturam manuum, nec ultra protendatur. Pannus vero habituum sit coloris cinerei, ut frequenter in nostris capitulis extitit declaratum. Mantellos quoque de panno vili et humili fratres habeant non rugatos circa collum vel crispas, nec usque ad terram per integram saltem palmam protensos.

Clothing to be worn at night.

Nec dormiant unquam fratres sine habitu, femoralibus, et corda, nisi manifesta necessitate vel infirmitate cogantur. Et quicumque repertus fuerit jacere sine habitu, in terra coram fratribus in sequenti prandio sine habitu comedat.

Vicarii et custodes seu gardiani graviter puniant illos, qui vitiosi fuerint, non cogente necessitate, portare capitegia seu sudaria circa collum, et almutia alba sive rubea, sive de panno vel de tela. Uniformity of clothing.

Item fratres sani in dormitorio culcitris, lintheaminibus ac pulvinaribus de pluma non utantur. Cingulum habeatur corda communis et rudis, et omnis curiositas ab ea penitus rescindatur. Matrasses, &c. not to be used.

Habeantur calciamenta de corio in communi, tantum pro missis celebrandis, et fratres occasione missarum et non alias sine vicarii provincialis, custodis vel gardiani licentia speciali¹ calcientur juxta regulam et declarationem papalem. No shoes to be worn except by celebrant at mass.

Tonsuram desuper aures tam clerici quam laici sibi fieri procurent. De quindena autem in quindenam semper omnes fratres radantur, et sit tonsura clericorum non modica, ut decet religiosos, scilicet ut inter ipsam et aures non sint plus quam tres digiti. Tonsure, shaving, &c.

Præterea cum regula dicat, quod fratres non recipiant pecuniam per se vel per interpositam personam, et qualiter hoc intelligi debeat per duos summos pontifices, scilicet Nicholaum tertium et Clementem quintum, aperte fuerit declaratum, ordinamus, ut hoc melius observetur, quod declarationes prædictæ quantum ad istum articulum et alia quæ pertinent ad observantiam paupertatis quater in anno, et ipsæ declarationes bis ad minus per integrum in anno legantur, ne ignorantia sit fratribus occasio delinquendi. Nullus frater, quacunque ex causa, pro se² pecuniam apud aliquem deponi sustineat vel reservari sine licentia speciali,³ et semper cum conscientia gardiani, et Directions respecting money.

Quicumque frater pecuniam supra se portaverit, vel manu propria contrectaverit, vel in cella retinuerit, pœna proprietarii puniatur. Pœna etiam proprietarii puniantur fratres illi qui, sine sui superioris licentia, libros sibi concessos vel alia quæcunque extra conventum vel locum fratrum ponunt, et a sæcularibus faciunt conservari.

Of incurring debts. Caveant gardiani et fratres alii ne se vel locum aliquem in debita onerosa inducant, vel induci permittant, absque vicarii provincialis licentia aut consilio requisito et assensu. Et de his debitis in quolibet provinciali capitulo perquiratur. Verum pro ædificiis construendis, locis mutandis vel ampliandis, aut pro libris scribendis vel emendis, debita de cætero fieri prohibemus, nisi vicarius provincialis de discretorum consilio, ex causa rationabili, viderit dispensandum. Insuper fratres non habeant nec mutuent vasa aurea vel argentea, nec utantur eisdem vel aliis localibus preciosis, et quicumque contrafecerit habitis spoliatur, et de mutuatis puniatur, nihilominus ad arbitrium vicariorum. Ecclesias etiam et alia ædificia, quæ excessiva merito debeant reputari, fieri de cætero firmiter prohibemus. Paramenta quoque et vasa ecclesiastica decencia et numero et magnitudine sufficientia a fratribus habeantur, et in his superiores invigilent ut omnis superfluitas evitetur. Nullum etiam sumptuosum vel notabile ædificium de cætero construatur vel destruat sine licentia vel dispensatione vicarii provincialis; et qui contrarium fecerit vel consuluerit per vicarium provincialem de loco irrevocabiliter expellatur, et aliis pœnis gravibus puniatur. Custos vero prædictum excessum statim debeat denunciare provinciali vicario.

No document of the nature of a bond to be entered into. Item fratres nullam literam vel instrumentum confici permittant, in quibus protestentur pecuniam se recepisse; possunt tamen verbo vel scripto dicere tantam pecuniæ quantitatem datam vel legatam pro sua necessitate, vel ab aliqua persona esse acceptam, et sibi plenarie satisfactum.

Libri fratrum decedentium illorum erunt conventuum seu locorum, a quibus vel a quorum terminis habiti sunt vel acquisiti. Et si super hoc dubium in posterum oriatur, illud fiat quod vicarius provincialis in sua provinciali congregatione indicaverit faciendum. Et pro ipsorum librorum conservatione volumus quod libri conventuum registrentur, et annis singulis registra de ipsis confecta coram conventu legantur seu renoveantur. Distribuantur autem libri hujusmodi per guardianum de consensu conventus et licentia vicarii provincialis; et schedulam¹ semper recipiant ab eis quibus fuerint distributi.

Obsecrat tamen generalis congregatio quod omnes fratres in ipsa Quadragesima intermedia, scilicet Beati Francisci, in conventu sint una refectione contenti, ad amovendas multas deordinationes et ad obtinendam benedictionem paternam, exceptis minutis, debilibus, et infirmis. Apostolorum vigiliæ jejunentur intus et extra, Beatorum Philippi et Jacobi, Johannis Evangelistæ, et Barnabæ, tantum exceptis. Vigilia beati Bartholomei jejunetur, et festum fiat secundum modum patriæ. Vigilia beati Francisci jejunetur. Jejunia regulæ in cibo quadragesimali servantur, nisi aliquando vicario provinciali quantum ad aliquos conventus seu loca aliud videatur de consilio discretorum. Circa esum carnum fratres temperate se habeant, et de sero in locis suis nullo tempore carnes comedant, exceptis infirmis et hospitibus denuo venientibus, et nisi ex causa rationabili superior aliquando viderit dispensandum. De non comedendo autem carnes in refectorio ac in nonnullis certis festivitibus per annum occurrentibus teneat quælibet provincia suam consuetudinem, vel faciat super hoc juxta suorum præsentium dispositionem.

Officers of order to fare like ordinary friars.

Rursus ordinamus quod vicarii, custodes, gardiani ac eorum vicarii sint cum fratribus in conventu, in ecclesia et in mensa; et in cibis, in vestibus et lectis, quamdiu sani et fortes fuerint, eisdem fratribus se conforment.

Ordinamus etiam quod vicarii et custodes sollicitam curam gerant, quod de eleemosynis et rebus aliis, quæ obvenerint conventibus, per gardianum provideatur moderate juxta eleemosynarum et obventionum hujusmodi quantitatem fratribus in communi, ne fratres ipsi, propter defectum communis et sufficientis victus, seorsum comedere, et particulariter ac deordinate vitæ causa, dent fratribus extra communitatem licentiam comedendi. Volumus quoque quod semper in mensa conventus lectio habeatur. Readings at table.

Caveant fratres in festo sancti Nicholai seu Innocentium, vel quibuscunque aliis festis, vestes extraneas religiosas seu sæculares aut clericales vel muliebres sub specie devotionis induere; nec habitus fratrum sæcularibus pro ludis faciendis accommodentur, sub pœna amotionis confusibilis de conventu. Of misuse of habit of order, &c.

Ordinamus insuper quod fratribus infirmis fratres infirmarii, et alii fratres infirmorum servitiis deputati, studeant cum diligentia et sedulitate juxta regulæ et caritatis præceptum eis servire. Vicarii vero, custodes et gardiani, eorumque vicarii, eis serviri facere, et de cunctis necessitatibus providere seu provideri facere debeant, et hoc de communibus eleemosynis, nisi pro necessitate fratris infirmi esset distincte aliqua eleemosyna deputata. Visitatores quoque in provinciis, quas visitant, de hoc articulo signanter inquirent, et si aliquas provincias vitiosas in hoc invenerint, fideliter annuntient veritatem capitulo seu congregationi generali. Care of sick brethren.

Item ordinamus quod gardiani non possint indui de quacunque eleemosyna, nec pannum recipere pro vestitu, donec omnibus fratribus indigentibus loci sui fuerit de vestimentis provisum. Wardens to share in offerings after their inferiors.

Fratres omnes hospites recipiantur in visceribus caritatis, et maxime venientes de extraneis partibus et remotis. Ipsi vero hospites in locis ubi ultra tres dies moram fecerint, dicant in capitulo culpas suas, et dicta culpa acceptaque pœnitentia, egrediantur. Of the sacraments and of the appointment of a confessor for each friar.

Ad illud autem altissimum Eucharistiæ sacramentum diligenter se præparent fratres omnes. Et, ut hoc melius fiat, statuimus ut singuli fratres determinatos de conscientia gardiani habeant confessores, quibus bis ad minus in qualibet septimana confiteantur. Fratres vero non sacerdotes de quindena in quindenam semper communicent in missa conventuali, nisi remanserint de licentia præsentis: et de hoc solliciti sint gardiani, ut per utriusque sacramenti frequentiam sanctæ conversationis in utroque homine puritas observetur.

Of bodily labour and other occupations.

Item ad otium evitandum ordinamus, quod tam clerici quam laici compellantur per suos superiores in occupationibus vel laboribus sibi competentibus exerceri, et si qui inventi fuerint notabiliter vitiosi vel otiosi, per vicarium et custodem voce activa et passiva priventur: quod si superiores in hoc fuerint negligentes a visitatoribus puniantur, qui diligenter inquirent qualiter hæc constitutio observetur. Item statuimus et ordinamus ad præstandum in scientia pie proficere volentibus auxilium et favorem, quod de cætero studia in unaquaque provincia habeantur in locis per provinciale capitulum ad hoc assignandis, per quæ studia fratres in primitivis scientiis et in sacra theologia debite instruantur, et super hoc vicarii provinciales diligenter invigilent, ut per gardianum et alios hæc ipsa constitutio debitum sortiatur effectum.

Of receiving holy orders.

Item fratres sacros ordines non recipiant sine sui vicarii provincialis licentia vel custodis, cui vicarius provincialis hanc licentiam dederit; et quicumque contrafecerit a suscepto ordine suspendatur. Nec aliquis promoveatur ad sacerdotium nisi ætatis suæ xxv^m annum attigerit.

DE MODO EXTERIUS EXEUNDI.

Quintum Capitulum.

Ordinamus quod discursus inutiles cum summa diligencia a superioribus, quantum fieri poterit, arceantur; et nullus frater vadat pedes vel eques sine fratre socio; aut sine fratre socio alicubi commoretur.

Tollatur quoque abusus asinandi præterquam in casu necessitatis, ut regula concedit, attentis tamen verbis domini Bonaventuræ, in sua declaratione super hoc passu, dicentis fratres non debere equitare neque bigare nec quadrigare nisi in manifesta necessitate per vicarium vel custodem, vel in eorum absentia per gardianum seu ejus vicarium, de consilio discretorum judicanda.

Vicarii provinciales vel custodes curam habentes monialium Sanctæ Claræ in suis provideant capitulis qui fratres et quomodo ad earum loca licentiarum habeant, vel eis ad servitium deputari. Itaque alii fratres ad ipsarum monialium loca absque ipsius capituli dispositione seu licentia accedere non præsumant.

Item ordinamus quod fratres suas provincias exeuntes gardianis seu vicariis conventuum per quos transierint suas obedientias vel licentias ostendant, et ipsi gardiani vel vicarii eas exigant si in ostendendo fratres fuerint negligentes. Fratribus autem ad alia loca fratrum nostræ familiæ intra provinciam iturisdentur litteræ testimoniales, vel non dentur, secundum dispositionem mittentium et distantiam viarum. Et priusquam ad hujusmodi officia assumantur, testimonium habeatur de eorum vita et sufficientia a fratribus fide dignis et notitiam eorum habentibus; et de ipsorum ac discretorum ad provinciale capitulum transmissorum consilio deputentur. Et sint instructi ad hujusmodi confessiones audiendas assumendi in casibus reservatis. Confessiones quoque mulierum audiantur in aliquo patenti ecclesiæ loco, vel alio loco honesto etiam patenti. Nullus frater pro confessione audienda, vel alia quacunque de causa, juxta mulierem stet vel sedeat, nisi ipse et socius libere possint mutuo se videre. Et caveant fratres omnes a suspectis consortiis et prolixis colloquiis mulierum, et quicumque contrafecerint a sociis accusentur. Item nullus frater a muliere votum continentiae requirat, seu oblatum recipiat, seu ad faciendam sibi obedientiam inducat; et quicumque contrafecerit a vicario provinciali per sex menses probationis caputio vel alia pœna æquivalenti puniatur.

Nullus insuper gardianus recipere possit fratres alterius conventus sine licentia remanendi venientes, sed ad suum vicarium provincialem eos remittat. Capitulum generale. Ordinamus quod nullus frater provinciali vicario inferior, nisi ex speciali generalis vel provincialis vicarii licentia, possit aliquem absolvere a peccato inobedientiæ contumacis, proprietariæ rerum detentionis, lapsus carnis, furti rei notabilis vel frequenter iterati, injectionis manuum violentæ, falsi testimonii in judicio facti, compositionis vel projectionis libelli famosi, falsificationis sigilli cujuscunque personæ notabilis, et falsæ criminationis in infamiam cujuscunque. Dicimus autem inobedientiam contumacem quando quis, trina admonitione præmissa, factis congruis intervallis, per diem naturalem inobediens perseverat. Quare præsentī ordinatione statuimus, quod si qui fratrum, divina permittente justitia, et hostis antiqui fallacia procurante quod absit præmemoratis criminibus, aut aliquo præmissorum fuerint irretiti, pro absolutionis beneficio ad præfatos vicarios vel eorum commissarios recurrere debeant sine mora.

Nullus confessor absolvere possit de tactibus impudicis enormibus, nisi qui de lapsu carnis habet licentiam absolvendi. Et de sollicitantibus ex certa scientia ad peccatum carnis idem judicium habeatur. Item custodes non possint absolvere a prædictis etiam in privato commissis, nisi per vicarium committatur eisdem.

Item si aliquis vicarius provincialis committat alicui subditorum suorum auctoritatem suam super illis casibus, qui vicariis provincialibus reservantur, si contingat vicarium mori vel ab officio vicariatus amoveri, talis commissio penes illum, cui facta fuerat, remaneat donec vicarius in provincia habeatur. Et quicumque confessor ex certa scientia præsumperit absolvere a prædictis, suspensus sit ipso facto a confessionibus audiendis, nec restitui possit nisi per provincialem vicarium: et quicumque in hoc vitiosus legitime fuerit deprehensus, pœna carceris puniatur. Si quis autem ausus fuerit affirmare, quod quilibet sacerdos possit absolvere a peccato super quo non habet commissam auctoritatem, et maxime de prædictis, et correctus revocare noluerit, tanquam errans et subversor carceri mancipetur.

Bonifacius Papa octavus. — Generalis et singuli provinciales ministri et eorum vicarii ac etiam custodes in provinciis et custodiis sibi commissis, fratribus constitutis ibidem, et aliis fratribus ejusdem ordinis interdum ad eos declinantibus undecumque, absolutione et dispensatione indigentibus, sive priusquam intraverint ordinem, sive post in casibus excesserint pro quibus excommunicationis, interdicti, aut suspensionis incurrerint sententias a jure vel a iudice generaliter promulgatas, et hujusmodi sententiis innodati, aut in locis interdicto suppositis divina officia celebrantes, vel suscipientes ordines sic ligati, notam irregularitatis incurrerint, absolutionis et dispensationis beneficium valeant impartiri, nisi adeo gravis et enormis excessus fuerit, quod sint ad eandem Sedem merito destinandi. Fratres etiam quos, pro tempore, vos generalis et provinciales ministri in proprios et vices vestras gerentes ac etiam vos custodes in proprios confessores habueritis, absolutionis beneficium et dispensationis vobis, cum expedierit, valeant impartiri juxta formam concessionis super absolutione et dispensatione ejusdem ordinis vestri superius factæ et infra. Inhibemus insuper universis vestris fratribus ne aliquis eorum, nisi in necessitatis articulo, aliis quam prælatis suis peccata sua confiteri præsumat, vel aliis sacerdotibus ejusdem ordinis secundum regulam et ipsius ordinis instituta.

Hoc autem tam privilegium quam statutum non intelligitur de injectione atroci, vel subditi in prælatum. Nullus incarceretur nisi pro manifesto et enormi excessu. Enormem autem dicimus excessum vel ratione generis peccati, ut est lapsus carnis, inobedientia contumax, et perfidia hæresis; vel ratione circumstantiæ, sicut est furtum rei notabilis vel notorie factum, seu quia frequenter iteratum, et de similibus idem iudicium habeatur.

Hoc intelligimus debere fieri quando commissus excessus est rei evidentia manifestus. Habeantur autem boni carceres et fortes sed humani.

Fratres evidenter notati de suspectis consortiis et colloquiis mulierum, quæ in regula prohibentur, si admoniti et correcti sufficienter se non correxerint, si in officiis fuerint, ab omnibus absolvantur vel suspendantur per vicarium. Si vero in officiis non fuerint, priventur libris et omni actu legitimo, et cui hæc pœna non competit, probationis caputio et aliis pœnis gravibus puniatur ad arbitrium vicariorum. Et intelligimus suspecta consortia non solum de mulieribus, sed etiam de suspectis familiaritatibus quibuscunque. Item quicumque frater consuetus fuerit a suo fratre socio cum mulieribus sequestrari, de quibus iudicio praelati sui merito possit oriri suspicio, si canonicè monitus et correctus se non emendaverit, tanquam suspectus de mulieribus omnibus officiis ordinis et omni actu legitimo privetur; et si taliter punitus iterato duobus fide dignis testibus convincatur de sequestratione prædicta, vel si sequestrationes hujusmodi suspicionem multis violentam fecerint sui praelati iudicio de consilio discretorum, et probentur legitime, absque monitione et punitione præmissa, arceatur ad veritatem dicendam. Si vero unus testis fide dignus de sequestratione prædicta appareat contra eum, et alius de lapsu carnis, arceatur gravius in domo disciplinæ.

Of the offence of owning property.

Quicumque frater inventus fuerit proprietarius, libris et omni actu legitimo privetur. Laici vero, qui libros et officia non habent, probationis caputio vel alias debite puniantur. Et si quis taliter inventus fuerit in morte proprietarius, careat ecclesiastica sepultura.

Of incorrigible offenders.

Fratres incorrigibiles, cum suis excessibus conscriptis et examinatis fideliter per vicarium vel custodem seu visitatorem, ad provinciale capitulum transmittantur. Quod si adeo incorrigibiles fuerint, quod nec culpam humiliter recognoscere nec pœnitentiam condignam subire voluerint, carceri mancipentur. Si vero pœnitentiam accipiant et correctionem promittant, cum misericordia eis pœnitentia imponatur, quam si portare contempserint, ad consueta vitia revertentes, in sequenti capitulo carceri mancipentur.

Debeant autem fratres exeuntes in reditu suo secreto gardiano suo excessus sui socii notabiles intimare. Quod si non fecerint, per superiorem, cui de hoc constititerit, in jejunio panis et aquæ vel alias graviter puniantur. Et si unus frater excessum alterius faverit per duas vias, utpote per confessionem et per alium modum, nihilominus gardiano suo dicere teneatur ut prædictum est.

Quicumque frater deposuerit coram quocunque prælato vel visitatore falso et scienter de aliquo crimine contra fratrem; vel ad hoc faciendum aliquam personam induxerit; vel revocaverit falso, vel ad revocandum induxerit quod vere deposuerit; a solo vicario provinciali, vel ejus commissario possit absolvi. Ita duntaxat, quod prius satisfaciat, prout sibi possibile fuerit, in forma secundum quam deposuit vel revocavit, scilicet publice vel occulte; et si de prædicto crimine convictus fuerit, pœna carceris puniatur.

Declaramus quod ubicunque in constitutionibus continetur aliqua censura suspensionis vel hujusmodi, ubi non sit lata sententia sed tantum comminatio de futuro, nec ibi exprimitur a quo imponi debeat vel infligi intelligitur ab eo infligi debere coram quo legitime probatur excessus, dum tamen hujusmodi excessus correctio pertineat ad eundem.

Deprivation of offices.

In privatione vero officiorum ordinis intelligitur privatio non solum prælationis sed confessionis, prædicationis, lectionis, diffinitionis, visitationis, et electionis ad capitulum pro discreto. In privatione vero actuum legitimorum nolumus quod intelligatur privari executio ordinum, vel testificatio in iudicio, nisi specialiter exprimat.

The present statutes to be carefully observed, and to be kept secret from the world.

Ne labor capituli generalis sit inanis, et in contemptum veniat ordinis disciplina, vicarii, custodes, et gardiani constitutiones præsentis diligenter faciant observari, quas quilibet gardianus in loco suo studeat diligenter habere, et in sua custodia reservare, cavendo ne extraneis publicentur. Ipsas etiam ter in anno ad minus faciant fratribus suis legi. Si quos vero invenerint discolos, cogant eos ad plenam observantiam pœnarum, quæ in ipsis constitutionibus sunt taxatæ; et si eorum contumacia exegerit, etiam graviore imponant.

Of commutation of sentences.

Conceditur quoque generali et provincialibus vicariis, in casu speciali atque ex causa rationabili, commutare pœnas hujusmodi, ac eas mitigare, quod si ex eorum remissione solvatur ordinis disciplina, accusentur in capitulo generali. Caveant autem vicarii provinciales a multiplicatione statutorum provincialium et quorumlibet præceptorum, propter oblivionis et transgressionis periculum evitandum.

DE ELECTIONIBUS ET INSTITUTIONIBUS OFFICIARIORUM.

Septimum Capitulum.

Election of wardens.

Election to office of custos. Confirmation of elections to such offices.

Statuimus ut deinceps gardiani in singulis locis eligantur per conventus eorundem locorum, die ad celebrandam electionem hujusmodi per eorundem vicarios assignata. In quorum electione nullus vocem habeat, nisi saltem qui xxv^m suæ ætatis annum attigerit, et in sacris fuerit ordinibus constitutus. Ubi autem custodes habentur, servetur in eorum electione consuetudo hactenus observata. Dictorum vero electionum custodum et gardianorum confirmatio pertineat ad generalem vel provincialem vicarium. Et si ad electionem hujusmodi faciendam per viam scrutinii procedatur, et votis in diversa divisio, electiones plures in discordia celebrari contigerit, illa, quæ a majori parte numero omnium in dicta electione vocem habentium, nulla zeli vel meriti collatione habita, fuerit celebrata, exceptione seu contradictione quacunque partis alterius non obstante, per dictum vicarium de consilio discretorum de ordine, prius tamen ex officio prout ad ipsum spectat diligenti examinatione præmissa, confirmetur vel infirmetur, prout ei secundum Deum videbitur expedire. Et si fuerit infirmata, ad dictos electores electio revertatur, nisi scienter eligant indignum, quo casu ad dictum vicarium illa vice, ipso facto, provisio hujusmodi devolvatur. Et eadem fiat devolutio si dicti electores, die ad eligendum custodem vel gardianum assignata, eligere prætermittant. In electionibus quoque prædictis et confirmationibus earundem, declaramus electores seu confirmatores formis aut solempnitatibus quibuscunque a jure statutis non arctari.

Larger houses to be called convents, and to have wardens. Smaller friaries to have superiors.

Item loca nostra auctoritate Apostolica fundata, in quibus duodecim fratres ad minus commode vivere possunt, appellentur conventus, et habeant gardianos. Alia vero loca, quæ non sunt conventus, superiores habeant, qui duntaxat vicarii appellentur.

Circa vero vicarii generalis electionem ordinamus, quod ad electionem procedatur hoc modo: electoribus congregatis die ad eligendum præfixa, primo invocata Sancti Spiritus gratia, fiat inclusio electorum, in qua electione vocem habeant vicarii provinciales et custodes ubi habentur, et discreti discretorum, quorum voces, discretorum atque etiam vicariorum absentium, per congregationem generalem suppleantur. Quibus sic congregatis et inclusis, vicarius provincialis ubi sit capitulum disquisitores instituat de duorum vel trium consilio discretorum, qui singulorum vota, seorsum aliquantulum, coram omnibus fideliter perquirant et conscribant, ita quod singuli, antequam recedant ab eis, audiant qualiter conscripserint vota sua. Et fratres electores in exprimendo vota sua his verbis utantur, "Ego, talis vicarius vel custos seu discretus, talis vel talis provinciæ, nomino talem fratrem pro generali vicario," quibus per ordinem conscriptis, statim in eodem loco, antequam fratres recedant vel colloquantur, ad invicem publicentur in medio quæ conscripserunt. Quod si, divina gratia inspirante, in unum aliquem concordaverint, illius electio firma est absque aliqua quæstione; si vero in partes inæquales se dividerint, ille in quem duæ partes eligentium consenserint, pro vero electo habeatur. Postquam electio fuerit de eo pronunciata, surgat unus ex electoribus a prædicto vicario deputatus et dicat, "In nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. Ego, frater talis, nomine meo et nomine omnium vestrum qui mecum consensistis, eligo talem fratrem in generalem vicarium totius nostri vicariatus cismontani." Quo facto statim dicitur, "Te Deum laudamus." Et in omni pronuntiatione electionis forma prædicta ab omnibus uniformiter observetur.

Circa vero electionem vicariorum provincialium similiter procedatur ut in electione vicarii generalis; excepto quod sufficit vicarium provincialem eligi a majori parte medietate omnium in dicta electione vo-cem habentium; et excepto quod electores non oportet includi, nec in fine cantare "Te Deum." Ordinamus quoque quod ipsi vicarii provinciales, convocata provinciali congregatione, a subditis, id est a fratribus de corpore provincialis capituli, eligantur, confirmandi per provincialem ministrum, et si ipse renuerit, elapso triduo, pro vere confirmatis auctoritate Apostolica habeantur.

Quoad visitatores seu visitationem provinciarum id tantum, et eo modo, de cætero fiat prout generalis congregatio seu ipse generalis vicarius duxerit disponendum. Ordinamus insuper quod in promotionibus ad officia ordinis et in correctionibus criminum, et in aliis gravibus negotiis, prælati et visitatores consilium similiter requirant et servent patrum discretorum, vel majoris partis eorundem, nec in consiliis aliquis præsidens suam per se vel per alium aperiat voluntatem. Et caveant omnes a verbis superfluis vel injuriosis in consiliis tribuendis.

DE CAPITULIS FRATRUM.

Octavum Capitulum.

Of con-

chapters.

Ordinamus quod capitulum culparum, sicut consuetum est, ter in hebdomada ad minus celebretur, in quo quotidianæ culpæ et negligentiae plene et singillatim recognoscantur, et recognitæ debite puniantur. Cæterum ordinamus, ut singulis annis in singulis provinciis, provincialis congregatio seu capitulum celebretur, nisi quoad aliquas provincias provinciali vicario cum suo capitulo videretur potius differendum. In quo capitulo locus et dies sequentis capituli assignetur, ita quod redeuntes de capitulo generali proximo præcedenti valeant interesse. Ad illud autem capitulum conveniant custodes et discreti, proviso quod multitudo venientium evitetur. In hoc autem capitulo et in aliis vocem non habeant fratres in monasteriis monialium commorantes. Admittantur tamen ad electionem discreti ad capitulum transmittendi in locis juxta quæ morantur, sicut fratres cæteri de conventu. Nullus frater præsens vel absens possit in electione aliqua per scrutinium facta vocem suam committere alteri, nisi juxta ea quæ in privilegio domini Nicholai de custodibus continetur.

Ad præfixam autem diem electionis discreti omnes fratres conventus ejusdem conveniant, bonam fidem habeant, et gardiani omnibus denuntient, quibus poterunt, bona fide. Et ut aliquorum ambitio et insolentia non crescat, ordinamus ut nullus frater eodem anno in electione discreti ad provinciale seu custodiale capitulum transmittendi vocem habeat nisi unam, et si secus factum fuerit secunda vox nulla sit, et inter voces eligentium minime computetur.

Election of representatives for the provincial chapter.

Ordinamus insuper quod fratres juvenes non habeant voces in electione discreti, nec in approbatione mittendorum ad capitulum ipsum, prisquam ætatis suæ vicesimum annum compleverint secundum custodis vel gardiani judicium de consilio discretorum, nisi de ipsa ætate testimonium certius habeatur. Hanc electionem discreti ad capitulum mittendi fratres faciant prima die; alioquin vicarius vel custos eis provideat de discreto, quem si contigat mori vel legitime impediri, alterius provisio ad vicarium pertineat vel custodem.

Gardianus autem teneat capitulum quando de excessibus vicarii vel custodis et eorum insufficientia, et aliis transmittendis ad capitulum provinciale, perquiritur. Cum vero de excessibus gardiani perquiritur, aliquis eorum, institutus a gardiano de consilio aliquorum discretorum, teneat capitulum. Prædicti vero de excessibus prælatorum et eorum insufficientia diligenter inquirent; et alii fratres inquirenti bona fide veritatem de omnibus debeant respondere. In prædictis autem inquisitionibus tam revelantes accusantium nomina quam inquirentes ad pœnam, quæ superius ponitur sexto capitulo, astringantur. Custodes autem hujusmodi scrutinio non intersint. Illud autem scrutinium ultra unius diei naturalis spatium nolumus prolongari. Excessus autem gardiani, quando mittuntur ad capitulum provinciale, recitentur ei in publico coram suo conventu, praesertim si ad dictum capitulum non fuerit profecturus. Et si aliquid grave accidisset in provincia, vel contigisset in via, quod aliter ad capitulum istud non veniret, debeant fratres quibus notum est ipsum coram diffinitoribus accusare.

Preliminaries, and forms to be observed at provincial chapters.

Isti in loco capituli congregati ipsa die quiescant et deliberent usque ad mane diei sequentis, et tunc audita missa, ingrediantur capitulum, et invocata Sancti Spiritus gratia, fiat sermo fratribus in communi. Deinde quatuor ex ipsis tantum eligant¹ diffinitores per disquisitionem trium, quos vicarius et gardianus loci duxerint eligendos. Si autem in electionibus diffinitorum plures quam quatuor majorem partem vocum medietate omnium habere contigerit, illi qui plures voces habent ex ipsis pro veris diffinitoribus habeantur,² si vero³ fuerint in numero aequali, iteretur scrutinium quoad illos, quousque per pluralitatem vocum electio unius alteri praeferatur. In hujus autem capituli provincialis principio custodes et gardiani per se, si praesentes fuerint, vel per literas si absentes, suis officiis renunciare debeant, quorum renunciatio a vicario, vel ab eo qui tenet capitulum loco ejus, cum diffinitoribus, in fine capituli, si videbitur, admittatur. Si autem vicarius provincialis interesse non poterit, et commissarius ejus defuerit, custos in cujus custodia capitulum celebratur, vel gardianus, ubi custodes non habentur, in cujus conventu celebratur, teneat capitulum loco ejus. Praedicti vero diffinitores possint corrigere vicarium provincialem, diffinire et expedire cum ipso omnia quæ ad provinciale capitulum pertinebunt, quæ sunt hæc:—

Correctio eorum quæ in provinciali capitulo corrigenda notificantur. Of business to be transacted.

Ordinatio eorum quæ ad necessitatem morum vel honestatem provinciæ videbuntur pertinere, cum diversæ provinciæ diversis consuetudinibus varientur.

Nullas tamen constitutiones vel ordinationes ibidem faciant absque majoris partis capituli consilio et assensu. Subditi autem, qui fuerint diffinitores in capitulo¹ proximo præcedenti non sint diffinitores in capitulo¹ proximo sequenti, et dicimus hic subditos sub vicariis provincialibus constitutos. Prædicti vero electores quintum ex se ipsis eligant, qui in hoc tantum articulo possit diffinire: videlicet, si quatuor diffinitores, in correctione vicarii provincialis, in partes æquales se dividerint, eorum sententia prævaleat, quam ipse duxerit approbandam. Idem tamen quintus, qui sic eligitur, in capitulo provinciali non intelligitur pro diffinitore. Unde potest sequenti anno eligi diffinitor. Electis igitur diffinitoribus, literæ, quæ super facto provincialis vicarii a fratribus locorum sunt transmissæ, eisdem diffinitoribus præsententur, ante quarum præsentationem vicarii provinciales suo semper officio renuntient; quæ renuntiatio, si videbitur, acceptetur, tamen de triennio in triennium de aliis fiat nova electio et præsentatio prout supra. Debeant autem fratres, in provinciali capitulo immediate præcedente capitulum generale, visitare vicarium generalem de notabilibus excessibus certis, et in terminis explicatis, et tales excessus per discretum discretorum euntem ad generalem congregationem vel capitulum transmittantur, sub sigillis vicarii et gardiani loci in quo provinciale capitulum celebratur. Item debeant capitula provincialia significare capitulo generali de excessibus et insufficientia vicarii provincialis, et de receptione inutilium per eundem, et de statu ac communi pacē provinciæ sub eodem. Diffinimus quod custodes et gardiani habeantur pro prælatis quoniam ex privilegio domini Clementis, quod dicitur, "Mare magnum," eis committitur cura animarum, et gardiani in omnibus obediant suis custodibus. Caveant tamen ne in suis officiis ad invicem se conturbent.

Absence of the vicar provincial from his province.

Vicarius provincialis quando vadit ad capitulum generale, vel alias exit provinciam, vel sic infirmatur, quod non possit capitulo provinciali interesse, dimittat commissarium de consilio discretorum. Quod si vicarius absens fuerit absolutus in capitulo generali, officium exerceat ipse commissarius donec sibi constiterit, quod vicarius fuerit absolutus vel mortuus, et successor confirmatus.¹ Et idem fiat de custodibus et gardianis, quousque de aliorum confirmatione legitime eis constiterit.

Of transferring friars to other convents.

Item fratres non transferantur de loco ad locum, præsertim infra tempus provincialis capituli, ad morandum, nisi evidens necessitas vel communis utilitas hoc requirat. Et breviter, de loco ad locum non mittantur fratres, nisi ex necessaria causa fuerit faciendum.

Of promotion to offices.

Fratres patientes defectum natalium non fiant prælati in ordine nostro nec vicarii ordinarii, ita quod oporteat eos tenere capitulum, nec etiam fiant visitatores ordinis nostri aut sororum Sanctæ Claræ: nec fiant diffinitores, nisi cum eis fuerit dispensatum, nec ista dispensatio in prædictis sortiatur effectum donec sub sigillo authentico provinciali capitulo fuerit certitudinaliter declarata. Nullus frater præficiatur in officio fratrum, nisi possit ducere vitam communem, quæ tam a prælatis quam a subditis observetur, maxime in vestibus, cibis, et lectis. Executionem autem confessionum quarumcunque personarum extra nostrum ordinem existentium, aut prælationis officium, nullus de cætero habeat, nisi triginta annos completos habeat in ætate.

Item inhibemus ut nullus frater in aliqua electione seu visitatione vel promotione alicujus ad aliquod officium ordinis faciat colligationes vel inductiones, comminando, promittendo, laudando, vel mendaciter detrahendo; et qui scienter contrafecerit, ab omni actu legitimo suspendatur.

Of unfair practices at elections.

Quoad capitulum generale statuimus ut ad ipsum conveniant vicarii provinciales, et custodes electi a custodibus tantum ubi habentur custodes, vel si unus solus custos fuerit, ille veniat, necnon et singuli discreti a suis provincialibus capitulis ad hoc electi, ita quod custodes ipsi et discreti portent literas testimoniales sub sigillis vicarii et gardiani loci in quo capitulum provinciale fuerit celebratum. Et si alterum istorum mori contigerit, vel infirmari, vel alias legitime impediri, sic quod non possit venire, alius a custodibus, vel a discretis aliquibus a vicario vocatis, eligatur. Si tamen contingat ex prædictis aliquem vel aliquos non venire, nihil eorum, quæ expedienda sunt per capitulum, propter hoc omittatur, sed per ipsum capitulum voces absentium suppleantur.

Of the general chapter of the order.

By whom to be attended.

Quod si aliqui de prædictis remanserint, qui judicio generalis vicarii vel capituli non fuerint legitime impediti, si in officio prælationis vel lectionis fuerint absolvantur.

Of absence without due cause.

Ordinamus insuper quod nostri generalis capituli diffinitores sint omnes vicarii provinciales, custodes, et discreti, tantum personaliter præsentés; ita quod pro aliis missi, aut per congregationem suppleti, pro diffinitoribus nullatenus habeantur.

Questions to be decided by majorities. In omnibus autem memorati capituli diffinitionibus sententia plurium indistincte prævaleat, et inviolabiliter observetur; nec ab ea aliquis appellare præsumat.

Porro fratres qui veniunt ad generale capitulum, qui non occupantur in diffinitione negotiorum capituli, qualibet die, excepta vigilia et dominica Pentecostes, solempniter celebrent unam missam ad honorem Virginis gloriosæ, quod etiam volumus in provincialibus capitulis observari, quando fieri poterit bono modo.

Ceremonies to be observed on entering the general chapter.

Congregati igitur vicarii et dicti custodes et discreti, feria vi. ante festum Pentecostes, quiescant et delibere-rent usque in mane diei sequentis, et tunc, audita missa, ingressi capitulum, cantent hymnum, "Veni Creator Spiritus." Deinde dicatur versus, "Emitte Spiritum Tuum," oratio, "Deus, qui corda fidelium." Tunc literæ testimoniales custodum et discretorum vicario generali et vicariis provincialibus præsésententur.

In fine, "Requiem eternam," "Pater noster," "Et ne nos," "A porta inferi," "Requiescant in pace," "Domine exaudi," "Dominus vobiscum," oratio," "Absolve." Numerus autem fratribus ibidem recitatus ad singulas provincias deferatur, ut in singulis provincialibus capitulis modo simili absolvantur. Hinc omnes, qui non debent interesse capitulo, exeant. Nullus alterius religionis vel professionis, nullusque sæcularis cujuscunque ordinis, dignitatis, conditionis vel vitæ, tractatibus capituli admittatur. Missi ad executandum fratres, qui non venerunt, audiantur. Deinde fiat collatio super illis, quæ de provinciis ad capitulum sunt transmissa; et provideatur per generalem vicarium et diffinitores, de singulis ut omnibus, de correctione corrigendorum, de ordinatione ordinandorum. Et perquiratur diligenter qualiter regula et statuta in singulis provinciis fuerint custodita. Provideant etiam de mittendis de una provincia ad aliam ad morandum; et in fine assignetur locus generalis capituli sequentis. Et fiat communis confessio et absolutio; perseverantibus benedictio; apostatis anathematizatio. Deinde cantetur, "Te Deum laudamus," versus "Confirma hoc Deus," et oratio, "Actiones nostras." In fine, "Per Christum." Similis solennitas in fine provincialis capituli observetur. Quodcunque autem de cætero statutum fuerit in capitulo generali, sub sigillo generalis vicarii ad singulas provincias deportetur. Nihil autem grave contra aliquem fratrem ad capitulum generale portetur, nisi fuerit per provinciale capitulum discussum, et in scriptis sub sigillo authentico redactum. Similiter nec ad capitulum provinciale portetur aliquid, nisi per capitulum conventuale, modo consimili, examinatum fuerit, scriptum, et sigillatum.

Statuimus ut pro omnibus fratribus in nostro ordine decedentibus quilibet sacerdos, nisi contingat eum languore vel itinere præpediri, qualibet hebdomada de mortuis celebret unam missam vel appropriatam collectam mortuorum; cæteri fratres clerici dicant vigiliam IX. lectionum. Laici vero centum "Pater noster," cum totidem "Ave Maria" Et si omittantur in una hebdomada, possint suppleri in alia. Ordinamus etiam quod pro fratribus nostris et familiaribus defunctis, quorum recommendatio facta fuerit in capitulo generali, quilibet sacerdos annuatim celebret unam missam de mortuis, quilibet frater clericus dicet L^a psalmos, et quilibet frater laicus c "Pater noster." Et pro vivis familiaribus missæ, psalmi, et "Pater noster," totidem persolvantur. Ordinamus quod pro Cardinali, qui in ordinis regimine decesserit, a quolibet sacerdote ordinis tres missæ celebrentur, et a quolibet clerico unum psalterium, et a quolibet laico ccc. "Pater noster." Et idem fiat pro generali ministro ordinis in officio ordinis decedente. Et pro illis qui vadunt ad capitulum generale, si contingat eos mori in via, una missa dicatur a quolibet sacerdote. Officium pro defunctis fratribus et benefactoribus, et pro illis qui in nostris cœmeteriis sunt sepulti, ter in anno solenniter celebretur, scilicet proxima die ante festum Beatæ Mariæ Magdalenæ, et proxima die ante festum Sancti Michaelis, et feria secunda post dominica Septuagesimæ. Simile officium fiat pro patribus et matribus omnium fratrum ultimo die feriali ante Adventum. Clerici vigiliam, IX. lectionum et missam cantent: laici dicant c. "Pater noster." Ordinamus quod in quolibet conventu assignetur hebdomadarius, qui missam alternatim pro vivis et mortuis celebret, vel recommendet pro illis qui recommendantur ordini in qualibet regione. Item singulis annis pro hospitibus, qui in itinere fratres recipiunt, infra octavam Beati Francisci in honorem¹ ipsius sancti approprietur missa conventualis unius diei et una privata a quolibet sacerdote, et a quolibet clerico L^a psalmi, et a quolibet laico c. "Pater nos-

" ter."

Item ordinatur quod totus conventus vocetur et assistat fratri morienti, ejus exitum suis orationibus et suffragiis protecturus, et hoc quando bono² modo fieri poterit, iudicio gardiani, et si totus conventus adesse non possit, major vel saltem magna pars ipsius vocetur secundum dispositionem praesidentis.

Item ordinamus quod pro quolibet fratre in officio praelationis, gardiani, custodis, vel vicarii provincialis, aut generalis, decedente, a quolibet sacerdote, cui in morte praerant, dicantur tres missae; et a quolibet fratre clerico semel vigiliae IX. lectionum; et a quolibet laico c. "Pater noster" cum totidem "Ave Maria." Pro aliis autem fratribus, a quolibet sacerdote conventus in quo moriuntur³ una missa dicatur, et vigiliae a clericis, et "Pater noster" a laicis, ut prius persolvantur. Item liber defunctorum fratrum seu benefactorum specialium sicut consuetum est habeatur et legatur. In quo libro [scribantur] nomina et cognomina illorum, qui loca fratrum in toto vel in parte fundaverunt, aut fratribus aedificia construxerunt, seu construi fecerunt, vel eis notabilia donaria fuerunt elargiti, ipsaque beneficia eorundem anno quolibet in capitulo recitentur, et pro eorum animabus in speciali oretur.

Sequitur modus legendi declarationes et statuta:—

Quoniam in abbreviatione statutorum tam papalium quam generalium, 2^o capitulo, ordinatur quod declarationes dominorum Nicholai tertii et Clementis quinti bis ad minus per integrum in anno legantur, et articuli de observantia paupertatis, et de non recipienda pecunia ex iisdem declarationibus quater in anno. Item in eadem abbreviatione, infra 6^o capitulo, ordinatur, quod ipsa abbreviatio statutorum ad minus ter in anno legatur, ne ignorantia sit occasio fratribus delinquendi: idcirco hortatur vicarius provincialis, ut hoc ordinate fiat,¹ quod lectores mensæ sint solliciti ut ipsæ declarationes et statuta legantur temporibus infrascriptis, secundum modum hactenus consuetum et a patribus ordinatum.

Et primo, in capite mensium Januarii et Julii, declarationes domini Nicholai tertii et Clementis quinti cum ordinationibus cærimoniarum chori et refectorii per integrum legantur.

Item, in capite mensium Martii et Septembris, Maii et Novembris, articuli de non recipienda pecunia et observantia paupertatis, viz.: ex declarationibus domini Nicholai ab illo loco, "Porro cum regula ipsa expresse "contineat" usque ad illum locum exclusive, "Licet autem contineatur in eadem regula." Item ex declarationibus domini Clementis ab illo loco, "Porro cum "dictus sanctus volens fratres suos," usque ad illud paragraphum exclusive, "Demum quia ex eo quod dicta "regula."

Item ipsa abbreviatio statutorum Papalium et generalium legatur in crastino Epiphaniæ, et in crastino dominicæ. "Quasi modo," et in crastino Omnium Sanc-

The subjoined fragment of a "Letter of Confraternity" is bound up with a 14th century MS. (Bodleian, Rawl. c. 72). At the beginning of the volume is another mutilated letter of the same character, commencing thus, "Frater Stephanus Fratrum ordinis beati . . . dilecto nobis in Christo domino Willelmo . . .," but this is not certainly of Franciscan origin.

A "Letter of Confraternity" was exhibited to the Society of Antiquaries in 1794; one is translated and another referred to in the "Collectanea Anglo-Minoristica"¹; a translation of a fourth is printed by Kirkpatrick.²

The present specimen is in a 15th century hand, and is written on a slip of parchment four inches wide. It has been cut down to the size of the manuscript (a Speculum Peccatorum) to which it serves as a fly-leaf, and thus unhappily little more than half of each line of this rare and curious document remains.

The restoration³ now offered may be viewed as not entirely conjectural, the printed examples giving a clue to the general import of the letter.

Pius episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilecto filio vicario generali ordinis Minorum de observantia regulari Ultramontano salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem.

Intelleximus te nuper, ob devotionem carissimæ in Christo filiæ nostræ Mariæ Reginae Scotiæ illustris, et populi illius, ad requisitionem quorundam mercatorum, tuos fratres, causa prædicandi, ad ipsum regnum misisse, in quo nulla domus observantiæ tui ordinis constructa est, cum tamen et hoc summe utile videretur et populo gratum et acceptum. Sed monachi qui impræsentiarum aderant¹ non segniter agentes contra hujusmodi investituram, incontinenter appellaverunt. Quinimmo opposcentes se viritim pro jure suo tam ipsos delegatos quam fratrum conventiculum vix manibus innocentes² instanter abigerunt. Igitur fratres a mœniis beati Martyris iterato proscripti, nova molientes versutiæ argumenta, instar hydræ sibi reformantis capita, monachos gravibus laboribus attritos ac sumptuosis expensis aporiatos coram diversis iudicibus convenire et ad loca remotissima, beato Francisco in conclavi forsam repausante, in jus vocari fecerunt. Et cum plurimis dierum interstitiis altercatum esset inter partes, et fratres jactura causæ suæ affici formidantes, spreta iudicum suorum jurisdictione, ad regium suppedium se conferrent, iudices eremodiciam contrahere non morantes monachos ab observatione iudicii absolutos fore decreverunt. Rex autem, videlicet Henricus tertius, utpote vir pietatis, obsequiis passim intendens crebris fratrum supplicationibus, geniculationibus quoque assiduis obnixius interpellatus, directis ad capitulum Sancti Edmundi suis apicibus, abbati et conventui pro dictis fratribus regiæ dignationis intentas porrexit preces. [The document which follows is printed from the original in the Lambeth Palace Library. (Tenison MSS. No. 643, 15). It is without date, but the evidence derivable from the preceding account of the dispute between the monks and friars of Bury St. Edmund's leaves little doubt that it was issued by the Pope, Alexander IV., there mentioned. The appearance of the Bull itself confirms the inference as to its date.]

Alexander episcopus, servus servorum Dei, dilectis filiis ministro provinciali et fratribus ordinis Minorum de Anglia salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem.

Intellecto dudum ex insinuatione vestra quod dilecti filii conventus monasterii Sancti Edmundi ordinis sancti Benedicti, Norwicensis diocesis, vobis, super quodam fundo vestro ordini ex cujusdam nobilis liberalitate in villa Sancti Edmundi concessa, diversas et enormes injurias irrogarant, nos ad instantiam vestram super injuriis hujusmodi ad certos indices, sub certa forma, in favorem vestrum direxisse meminimus scripta nostra. Licet igitur ordinem vestrum, ex eo potissime quod olim, dum in minori essemus officio constituti, curæ nostræ fuit ab Apostolica Sede commissus, caritate præcipua diligamus, et vos tanquam prædilectos et singulares filios intra mentis ubera carius amplexemur, licet etiam favoris Apostolici sinum vobis et in hoc et in aliis quæ ipsius vestri ordinis incrementa respiciunt, manu munifica duxerimus explicandum, nostræ tamen intentionis extitit et existit sic ad vestrum commodum hujusmodi vobis exhibere favorem quod in aliorum præjudicium minime convertatur, quia quanto sinceriori vos affectu prosequimur, tanto ardentius cupimus vos ea semper agere per quæ famæ vestræ præservetur integritas, et status vestri ordinis firmiter et solidius roboretur. Cum itaque ille, quo vos in Christo complectimur, caritatis zelus id egerit, ut super his præsens ad vos pagina emanaret, universitatem vestram moneamus, rogamus, et hortamur attente, per Apostolica vobis scripta, mandantes quatenus maturitatem debitam erga præfatum monasterium, præsertim cum sit Romanæ ecclesiæ speciale, ac propter hoc ipsius jura teneamur ex Apostolatus officio specialius defensare, in hujusmodi negotio conservare curetis, ab ipsius monasterii molestiis et injuriis, sicut vos decet, penitus abstinendo, nihilque contra privilegia indulta, libertates et immunitates ac jura ipsius monasterii attemperando, ita quod scandala, quæ prædicti occasione negotii orta jam in illis partibus esse dicuntur, sopiantur; omnino murmurantium clamores queruli conticescent; et detrahentium vobis linguæ mordaces taciturnitatis nexibus vinciantur; ac in vobis, tamquam virtutum limpido speculo, grex dominicus salubriter dirigatur. Nos quoque, vestrorum laudabilium operum odore percepto, multa exinde in Domino perfusi lætitia, dulcia Sedis Apostolicæ ubera, quæ copiose hactenus in multorum beneficiorum perceptione suxistis, vobis, vestris exigentibus meritis, affectuosius porrigamus. [A few stanzas from one of the discreditable songs contained in a fourteenth century Franciscan MS. (Harl. 913) will suffice to show the character of the whole. Profanity and ribaldry are rife in this singular little volume, and specimens of both are grotesquely mixed up with serious and devotional extracts. Grammar has been set aside in favour of rhyme and rhythm in these scarcely intelligible stanzas, which are printed solely as a specimen of what a degenerate Franciscan could permit himself to write and sing.]

Minorum.*

Rex dilecto sibi in Christo ministro generali Fratrum de ordine Minorum salutem.

Scitur publice et, ut credimus, vos non latet qualiter dilecta consanguinea nostra Maria de Sancto Paulo, comitissa Pembrochæ, exilitati domus sororum de Waterbeche ordinis vestri pie compatiens, manerium de Deneye de licentia nostra pro uberiori sustentatione dictarum sororum suis sumptibus adquisivit, sed ad instantem supplicationem tam dictarum sororum quam fratrum ipsius ordinis affirmantium dictum manerium de Deneye esse pro mora dictarum sororum, ex causis variis, aptiorem, mutavit propositum, et post diffusos tractatus, cum unanimi consensu tam dictarum sororum quam ministri provincialis et fratrum seniorum ac majorum ordinis in eadem provincia degentium domum novam, in qua dictæ sorores et plures numero possunt commodius commorari, erexit, et ibidem ecclesiam aptæ pulchritudinis ac domos et alia necessaria sumptuose construxit; et subsequenter Abbatissa dictæ domus de Waterbeche cum majori parte sororum suarum, paucis sororibus ibidem ad tempus relictis quousque de eodem loco de Waterbeche, qui tunc de patronatu suo ut de feodo non fuerat, poterit provideri, ad domum de Deneye se transtulit, reverenter injungens sororibus sic relictis ut ad tempus starent ibidem sub obedientia sua et observantia regulari; sed post paululum dictæ sorores, nescimus quo spiritu, Abbatissæ suæ rebellionis calcaneum erigentes, eidem parere contemptibiliter renuerunt, et abbatissam aliam ac sorores plures alias de facto temere elegerunt, dicentes quod de loco illo nullatenus recedere proponebant, nonnullis fratribus illius ordinis eis faventibus et suum voluntarie defendentibus errorem in hac parte; propter quæ inter domos prædictas gravis fuit scandalorum et litium materia suscitata, in grave ipsius ordinis scandalum et derisum. Cumque dicta domina advocationem dictæ domus de Waterbeche ut de ea liberius posset disponere impetrasset, ac sibi per sorores dimissas in eadem domo fuisset, contra ea quæ prius concordata fuerant, nihilominus contradictum, rescriptum super his a Sede Apostolica ex certa scientia domini summi Pontificis impetravit, quibus in capitulo vestro provinciali publicatis, et super his habito consilio de deliberatione saniori, quia causa dictarum sororum dimissarum injusta fuerat reputata, inhibitum fuit per dictum capitulum singulis fratribus dictæ provinciæ sub certis pœnis ne dictis sororibus in causa prædicta præstarent de cætero consilium aut juvamen. Abbatissa vero de Deneye intelligens hoc quasi ex diffinitione capituli processisse, dictas sorores sic dimissas cum temere superelectis ut ad domum de Deneye cito declinarent, ibidem sub ejus obedientia et observatione regulari moraturæ, districtè moneri fecit; quod ipsæ, de quo gaudemus, fecerunt, ut dicitur, humiliter et devote. Quamobrem devotionem vestram attente rogamus quatenus in gratæ reducentes considerationis examine gratitudinem et gratiam per dictam comitissam ordini vestræ factam, et qualiter ad supplicationem ordinis dicta translatio facta fuit, velitis pro conservatione honoris vestri ordinis ac vitandis scandalis et dedignationibus plurimis, quæ sunt ex contrario verisimiliter proventura, rebellionem damnare prædictam, et processum ipsius Abbatissæ de Deneye factum in hac parte ex certa scientia confirmare, et ulterius ordinare ut fratres ipsius ordinis, secundum numerum et modum in Apostolicis litteris designatum, in dicta domo de Waterbeche residere compellantur, qui de bonis dictæ domus de Deneve victum recipiant et vestitum, et hoc sicut ordini vestræ favorem nostrum regium appetitis, petimus faciatis. Data in palatio nostro Westmonasterii, xv. die Junii.

[The following small selection of Inquisitions "ad quod damnum" contains, it is believed, earlier traces of several convents than are to be found in the Patent Rolls. In a few cases, Gloucester and Stamford for example, the latter apparently contain no entry whatever respecting the Franciscan houses.¹

These documents are, of course, no evidence whatever of actual grants. These appear on the Patent Rolls. In cases, however, in which from various causes the proposed grant has not taken effect, as possibly in the instances above cited, these inquisitions may be of considerable value.²]

Et quædam area, quæ continet in longitudine decem perticatas et in latitudine novem perticatas, tenetur de Leprosis beatæ Mariæ Magdalænæ extra Exoniam reddendo eisdem dimidiam marcam pro omni servitio, et tantum valet per annum. Et quædam area, quæ continet in longitudine sedecim perticatas et in latitudine tres perticatas, tenetur de Rogero de Molton reddendo eidem duos solidos, et hospitali Sancti Johannis Exoniæ duos solidos, et Sarre filiæ Henrici Hog quatuor denarios pro omni servitio, et valet per annum quinque solidos. Summa totius valoris illius areæ triginta et sex solidi et unus denarius. Dicunt etiam quod terra et tenementum prædicti Johannis sibi remanentia ultra donationem et assignationem prædictas sufficiunt ad consuetudines et servitia tam de prædicta area data quam retenta debita facienda, et ad omnia alia onera quæ sustinuit et sustinere consuevit, ut in sectis, visibus franci pleggii, auxiliis, tallagiis, vigiliis, finibus, redemptionibus, amerciamentis, contributionibus, et aliis quibuscumque oneribus emergentibus, sustinenda: et quod in assisis, juratis, et aliis recognitionibus quibuscumque poni potest, prout ante donationem et assignationem prædictas fieri consuevit, et quod patria per donationem et assignationem ipsius Johannis magis solito non onerabitur nec gravabitur. In cujus rei, etc.

CAERMARTHEN.

(Inquis. ad quod damnum, 23 Edward I., No., 78.)

Inquisitio capta per præceptum domini regis, domino Willelmo de Valencia nuntiante, die Sabbati proxima ante festum beati Johannis Baptistæ, anno regni regis Edwardi vicesimo tertio, coram Waltero de Pederton, constabulario de Kermerdyn, &c. . . . Qui dicunt per sacramentum suum, quod dominus rex est verus dominus cujusdam croftæ juxta placeam Fratrum Minorum, quæ quondam fuit Nicholai Symond, qui per feloniam forisfecit dictam croftam cum aliis terris infra villam de Kermerdyn et extra, et ita per eskaetam dominus rex possidet eam, et potest eam dare, vendere, et assignare quibuscumque et quandocumque sibi placuerit, sine nocumento et damno alicujus. Et continet dicta crofta unam acram, exceptis quatuor perticatis terræ. Et etiam dicunt prædicti jurati, quod prædicti Fratres Minores nequeunt commode ducere cursum cujusdam aquæ; quam habent ex dono ejusdem domini regis ad officinas suas¹ nisi per medium illius terræ, et etiam per medium alterius terræ jacentis ex opposito ejusdem terræ, et quæ quidem altera terra fuit prædicti Nicholai Symond, et est in manu dicti domini regis per eskaetam, et hoc sine nocumento et damno alicujus ut prædictum est. In cujus rei testimonium, &c. . . .
